1998 Miss American Clogger Pageant

by Sandra Thomas
Commerce, Georgia

The 9th Annual Miss American Clogger Pageant was held on July 31 and August 1, 1998 in Clemson, South Carolina. As in past years, a lot of preparation and hard work goes into making the pageant a success. Contestants, their families, and instructors work hard to prepare each clogger for this event. In addition, pageant directors and supporters go that extra mile to make sure everything will run smoothly. But all the hard work and effort would not be necessary if not for the support of our wonderful sponsors. The list continues to grow and our gratitude for all they do is enormous.

Pageant scholarship and prize donors for this year were Tenni-Sparkles, Carl's Clogging Supply, Stevens Worldwide, Inc., Precision Screen Print & Monogram, Lynn Ogle, Clogging Champions of America, Suzie-Q Creations, Barbara's Clogging Feet Supplies, Dee Gallina, Jeff Driggs, Dieter Brown & Steve Lanning, Naomi Fleetwood-Pyle, Chip Summey, Wilcox Travel, Jayne Treadwell, Susan Phillips, P & H engravers, and Si-Bill Video Productions.

This year's contestants arrived on Friday morning for orientation, where they got a chance to meet each other and receive their contestant numbers, t-shirts, and the first assortment of gifts and prizes from our many sponsors. Next came our first production number rehearsal. All the contestants were so prepared. It was obvious that they all had worked long and hard on learning the videotaped choreography that was prepared prior to the pageant. While rehearsals were in progress, Simone Pace -- a Pageant creator -- met with contestant's parents to discuss specifics of the weekend, and to entertain questions and concerns they all had. After a well-deserved lunch break, the ladies returned for the interview phase (25% of total score) of the competition. Although this is a phase that all the contestants seem to dread, they all came out with big smiles afterwards. They couldn't believe how much fun the judges were. After the interviews, it was time for individual talent rehearsals and more production number rehearsals. A special thanks goes to Sandy Southard, Miss American Clogger 1995-96, for helping to run all of the rehearsals. Friday ended with a pizza party and gift-giving for the contestants. Each year, all the girls (and their moms) outdo themselves with their originality and giving spirit in choosing gifts for other contestants. Even though we were all exhausted, there was still a lot of fun and laughter left in everyone!

After a good night's sleep, Saturday began with an Awards Program

FRONT AND CENTER

Making Your Mark

I had the great pleasure of spending a weekend with the Bailey Mountain Cloggers of Mars Hill College, in North Carolina recently. This dynamic group of young people acts as ambassadors for the college and for the preservation of the traditional art of clogging -- a traditional well-steeped in this mountain area. Bascom Lamar Lunsford helped to bring worldwide attention to the arts of clogging and traditional music through his years of travels, festivals and documentations of the mountain people. His legacy lives on in the halls of Mars Hill College, and his dream of gaining respect for the mountain ways is alive in the spirited programs and festivals which still bear his name.

While exploring the wealth of clogging history available here and enjoying some relaxing moments in this beautiful setting, I discovered another treasure through my time with the Bailey Mountain Cloggers.

Each year, Bailey Mountain changes as new dancers join and others leave. Degrees are completed and lives move on. Each year, eager new faces from across the country arrive to lend their talents to the ever-changing group. I met close to 40 teenagers and young adults with vastly different backgrounds and dance experiences -- some from champion competition teams with dozens of individual honors, and others from poor rural mountain neighborhoods where Mars Hill clogging can be a ticket for assistance in gaining a precious college degree.

Yet, amidst these differences and personalities, I met a highly professional group of dancers who take seriously their role on the group and who work together with amazing patience and camaraderie. I attended a clogging class for students at the college taught by members of the Bailey Mountain group. In five short weeks, these young people had taught their peers dozens of clogging steps and sequences, culminating in a dance which included clogging and step dance movements. The second half of the semester, I was told, would be dedicated to the teaching of old-time figures. Watching these young people teaching their classmates, with team members acting as group leaders and a student overseeing the group leaders, was inspiring. Bailey Mountain's Director, Jay Ledford (himself an accomplished competition and workshop veteran), carries this practice into the operations of the team itself, assigning members leadership over routines and projects. The success of the program is a testament to Jay's personal approach to leadership and the confidence that he instills in the dancers.

I had the feeling that each team member works to make their time on the team special. Each person wants to leave their mark -- their legacy -- to the group.

What a wonderful example for all of us. As we run our day-to-day classes, manage our teams and performing groups, sometimes we forget that our time here is also limited. What we bring to clogging, to our teams and to our dancers, is our mark and our legacy to this dance we love. Petty differences, and obstacles somehow loose their power when we focus on our greater purpose.

I want to thank Jay Ledford and the members of the Bailey Mountain Cloggers of Mars Hill College for their hospitality, their friendship, and for the great lesson they share with all of us.

Open The Door

In reading the August edition of The Double Toe Times, I was quite surprised to see the reprint of the article entitled "Open the Door!" Having recently left the team I have danced with for approximately six years and striking my own path, it was a comfort to see the things I had been thinking in print.

It seems that people forget that at some point in time someone else was the teacher and they were the student. I feel that no matter what I can teach my students with regard to clogging... the best thing I can teach them is that there is no room for jealousy. Everyone is good at what they do, but in different ways.

As my small team has started to travel down the long, winding road of performance schedules and workshops, etc., we have realized that there are many more obstacles on that road that we could not see. Around every bend something new is in store. But, so far, we are meeting the challenges as they come at us. We've talked at great length about what we want our team to be. We want to be friendly with others. We want to band together and work as a team, not just as individuals -- but at the same time -- leaving room for each and every person's individuality to shine. But, most of all, we have decided that there is no room for jealousy. We will not let the green-eyed monster take over our team as we have seen it take over many others.

Being only a short distance into my journey as a director, the best advice I can give someone starting out is to make friends and cherish the ones you have. You may not always like what they do or what road they choose, but eventually you always meet at an intersection in life and old disagreements will be forgotten. I think I can truly say that my team members are not just dancers... they have become friends as well.

Clog History and Internet Finds

Congratulations on your new undertakings as editor; I am certain The Double Toe Times will remain an interesting and high-quality clogging magazine.

I, for one, have always been interested in the history of clogging; most stories seem to attribute a comment by the Queen of England about the resemblance to English clog as she viewed a group dancing for the U.S. President. An article by Peg McLerran in an early Double Toe Times provides detail she found about Irish, African and Native American influences; she discusses Negro competition dances in the mid 1800's.

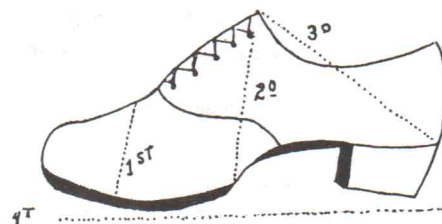

The Internet provides more browsing territory; I was recently surprised to find the Library of Congress site (<http://www.loc.gov>) has a collection of dance manuals on-line. These date back to about 1500, with books from many European nations and USA.

A complete author list and abstracts are included in a searchable database. A viewer allows you to download, view and even print every page, but this is very slow. There are two manuals on clog dancing (and they are not talking wooden shoes!). the one article contains a vintage advertisement offering leather clogs with jingles -- the cost is a whopping $4.50.

Dancing for enjoyment,

for the contestants, parents, directors and judges. In addition to receiving awards and prizes, the girls also received words of encouragement from all of this year's judges. Following the Awards Program, everyone went back to their rooms to prepare for a final run-through of the production numbers and the PAGEANT!

The pageant opened with our clogging production number featuring all contestants and the reigning queen, Dawn Duncan, clogging to "Don't Stop Moving" choreographed by Amy Jolly and Sarah Neas. What an appropriate title to start our show! The sound was wonderful this year, thanks to Dieter Brown and Steve Lanning. A special thanks goes out to Bill Nichols for the superior job he did with this year's video. Each contestant then competed in the talent phase (50% of score) of the pageant. Entertainment was provided by Dawn Duncan, Amy Jolly and Sarah Neas, and the Upstate Carolina Dance team under the direction of Heather Owens. A special thanks goes to our escorts Dieter Brown, Jay Ledford and Kevin Parrish. A special segment was also dedicated to all the contestant's clogging instructors.

One of the highlights of the pageant was reigning Queen Dawn Duncan's final walk. After being crowned the youngest contestant ever last year, Dawn and her family made a commitment to make the most of her year. She traveled extensively throughout the past year, and was always there to help festival and competition directors when needed. We received so many nice cards and letters after all of her appearances. We will miss her, but know that she will have continued success in all her goals and aspirations.

After all the scores were tabulated, the girls performed their evening gown production choreographed by Sandy Southard. It was absolutely beautiful. After all of the age division winners were awarded, our Miss American Clogger was announced.

This year's winner was Jamie Roach, for Piedmont, South Carolina. She competed in the pageant last year, where she was 1st runner-up in her age division. Jamie is a beautiful and talented 13 year old. I hope that many of you will get the opportunity to meet her during her reign this year. She has been very busy already, and has a full agenda planned for the year. She will travel to many competitions, workshops, conventions, and festivals to promote clogging and the Miss American Clogger Pageant. You may look for Jamie at events you attend, and don't forget to ask her about the surprises in store for the 10th Annual Miss American Clogger Pageant!

3rd Annual SunCoast Jamboree

Clogging's longest-running workshop thriving in its new location

by Dee Gallina
Novi, Michigan

Yes, folks! The Suncoast Clogging Jamboree is the longest-running clogging workshop in the industry. Sally Thompson, the Director, is from Jacksonville, Florida and the workshop was formerly known as the Jacksonville Clogging Jamboree. Due to the refurbishing of the Civic Center and football coming to Jacksonville, a location change had to be made. The move was made to the Sun Coast and many have made the adjustment to a new place and time.

So, off to the Adam's Mark Hotel, Ocean Center Convention Center and the Peabody Auditorium in Daytona Beach, Florida. This move has shown to be very successful. If you have not tried this workshop, we hope you'll join us (and combine it with a vacation next year)! There is lots to do within a four block radius of the convention site. A water park right across the street from the Ocean Center has been added. Best of all, everything is within walking distance!

Daytona Beach is a lovely vacation spot, and the Adam's Mark will extend the Clogger's room prices for pre and post days at the hotel. What a deal! No, it is not too hot in August. The halls of the Center are air-conditioned and well-maintained, and the outside activities are very manageable.

Thursday night is advanced registration pick-up and syllabus sales. This year, we had an open dance with Tandy Barrett leading us in some real fun dances for both cloggers and line dancers. A pool party was also going on at the same time, which the teens seem to prefer for their first night in Daytona Beach.

Friday proved to be a very exciting day with the main hall and the Country Western Line Dance halls open with scheduled teaches (the no brain strain effect). If you have never done a sit-down square dance, be sure to have Bill Nichols call it the next time you have him at your workshop.

Saturday was a full day of workshops with three clogging halls, one country line dance hall and a teen challenge hall all going at the same time. By Saturday evening, everyone was ready for the show and exhibitions at the Peabody Auditorium.

Debi Dillow, the CW line dance coordinator, invited Doc Cross, Kip Sweeney, Debbie Scott, Rose Haven, Larry Bass and Naomi Fleetwood-Pyle to keep the dance hall in full swing.

ALL-STARS

The Junior and Senior All-Stars are teens from a variety of clubs from the Jacksonville area. Sally chooses the All-Stars based on their ability and willingness to practice and participate in performing. This requires practice over and above their regular club activities. The All-Stars perform only at the Jamboree, but have performed at the National Clogging Convention in the past under the name The Jacksonville All-Stars.

TEEN CHALLENGE

This is an opportunity given to the teens age 13 - 19. Teen Challenge 1999 is our third year providing a hall for the teens to teach at a major workshop. Any instructor with a teen showing promise as a future instructor may submit their name -- along with a brief description of why you feel they would be a good instructor -- to Sally Thompson, Director, Sun Coast Jamboree, 1560 Grove Park Blvd., Jacksonville, FL 32216. Our clogging future builds on these up-and-coming young people.

EXHIBITIONS

Sally encourages exhibitions and appreciates those who participate. It takes a lot of time and effort and courage to perform on stage before your peers. If your club/team would like to exhibition at the SunCoast Jamboree in 1999, send a written request to Evon Johnson, Exhibition Coordinator, at the above address.

SHOW SPECTACULAR

The theme was Dance, Dance, Dance. It portrayed the John Hodges family from 1910 to the 1990's. Tandy Barrett provided the show dialogue with her unique ability to create a story line from a theme idea.

"Clogging has forever brought joy to all mankind through the ages," says senior angel, Matt. Bill Nichols then leads the show with a traditional clog dance, under the watchful eye of his Grandson in the musical. The show cast was 188 strong, with 14 teams participating. The teams and individuals in the show were from Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky and Massachusetts. The show received a standing ovation as a well-deserved thank you for a great job by all involved.

Groups Promote Clogging Nationwide!

Once Again, the Elm City Cloggers, of Branford, Connecticut performed for the Connecticut Special Olympics. The group performed two days, and included many of the Olympians in thier program. Director Barbara Rozett said that the event is always very special for her cloggers, and they have been invited to participate again in 1999.

The Corn Cob Cloggers, of Grand Ledge, Michigan perform each year in the Mudge's Follies in their home town during Yankee Doodle Days. The theme this year was Dynamic Duos, and they performed a routine to Dueling Banjos. Directors Mac and Louise McCreey said their group likes doing specialty acts because they can often help bring a show together through the music and staging. As you can see by this photo, this is a group that likes to have a good time!

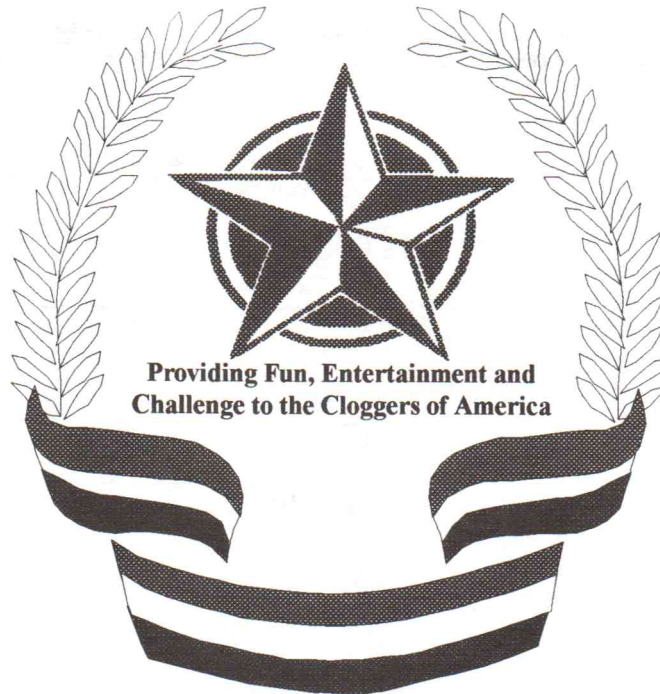

The Hooiser Hoedowners of Sunman, Indiana, under the direction of Connie Huffman, performed at Cincinnati's Union Terminal. Although one of the most beautiful places in the world to perform, it presents quite a challenge as the domed design of the main concourse has sound going in all directions! Taps and music become very hard to hear.

Nothing like bringing a good old-fashioned bluegrass hoedown to the city folks. The audience didnt know what to think at first, but we quickly had them stompin' their feet, clappin' their hands, and hollering their heads off!

This month's Web Spotlight is dedicated to one of the first sites built by cloggers for cloggers. Web Cloggers set the bar for clogging web sites, with pages for vendors, events, instructors and dancers, plus a cloggers mall with advertisements by a variety of clogging suppliers, including the Double Toe Times!

Web Cloggers is the only clogging site on the Internet that offers a chat room just for dancers. While the busy webmaster apologizes that he can't get to updating the site as often as he'd wish, Web Cloggers is still one of the most comprehensive clogging sites available.

your MUSIC ought to be as good as it gets!

DIGITALLY REMASTERED MUSIC

Cloggers put hours of practice into being the best dancers they can be. Hours of practice is often rewarded with prizes, ribbons, trophies, and/or applause. You spend so much time getting everything just right. Therefore, your music ought to be just right.

Ralph Pierce used top Nashville musicians to record the traditional songs which make up Ralph's Records. Here at Stevens we're taking the original reel-to-reel recordings and digitally remastering them; then putting them onto CD and cassette. Many titles are already available on cassette.

The quality and ease of queuing CD singles will soon be available beginning with Ralph's Practice for beginners; our most popular record title. Other popular titles will begin appearing one at a time as demand and time allow.

Free list of songs available.
