Comfort Food

There is an episode of the Andy Griffith show in which Opie and Aunt Bea go out of town and Andy is left to fend for himself. Being good neighbors, everyone invites him to their home for dinner and Andy finds himself with five different dinner commitments for the evening and he manages somehow to get to all five before the evening is over. All five hosts serve spaghetti... with each bragging that they have spiced up the dish by adding a new secret ingredient called "oregano." By the end of the evening, Andy's stomach is so upset from all of the spicy food that even hearing the phrase, "a new ingredient called oregano," makes him shudder.

Okay, so how does spaghetti with oregano apply to clogging?

Over the last decade, alot of people have tried to redefine and relabel clogging in the hopes of the dance form getting more acceptance among the dance studio world. I have heard some lament that clogging will never be accepted by the "legitimate" dance community as long as amateur groups are out at exhibitions presenting themselves as "cloggers," as if any dance form that can be done by the common man could never measure up to the artistic muster of other dance forms.

There is something about clogging that touches people in a common way. If you don't believe that, go to a fair or community event and see which dance forms draw the biggest crowds (and I'm not talking about just parents watching their own children. And look at the faces of those who watch. People relate to seeing their friends and neighbors and peers getting out in public and performing a dance that has energy and life and enthusiasm. No offense to dance studios, folk dancers or country dancers, but see what happens to the crowd when the cloggers are finished and the other groups take the stage. And, no they didn't stay just to snicker.... you can't pull people away from the arcade and a funnel cake that easily.

You can watch the Food Network all day and learn how to put bacon and chives and shrimp and all kinds of mess into your macaroni and cheese, but when it's all said and done, most folks would rather just enjoy a good ole fashioned bowl of granny's recipe.

So the next time you see adults performing or see cloggers doing traditional dancing or old-time footwork, remember that there is a whole world big enough to respond to the feel good reaction to everyday cloggers and also to appreciate the artistic skill of a modern percussive dance... whatever label you put on it.

Your Letters & Emails: Where It's @

Reeling in the Years

Thank you so much for the wonderful magazine. I am still clogging and having a good time. Age is simply a state of mind. One of the best cloggers I ever saw was 82 years young. Isn't that wonderful? I always enjoy reading your great magazine and I always share it with others.

Vemmee Taylor
North Las Vegas, Nevada

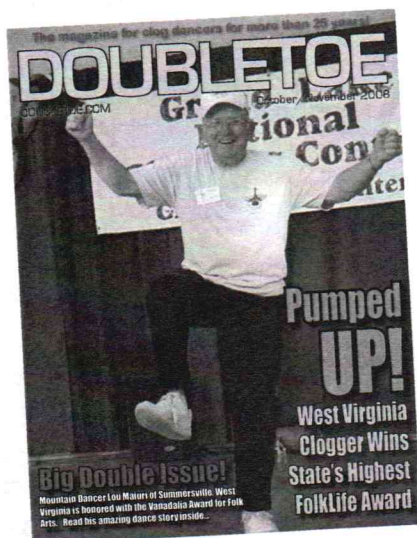

Editors's Note:

How good it is to hear from you Vemmee. You are an inspiration to so many cloggers in the West who see your smiling face on the dancefloor at conventions and workshops. You are a testimony to the ability of clogging to bring together people of all ages to join in one big happy family of dance. As we become a society of people who network socially on social networking sites instead of gathering together, I am saddened by the loss of community I see and the shrinking numbers at some workshops and conventions. If only more young people would take the opportunity to have their lives enriched by sharing the floor with folks like yourself, and sharing the wisdom of those who have danced lifetimes, and sharing the sheer joy of letting the music move your feet... whether those feet belong to a child of eight or a "child at heart" of 82.

Best wishes to you and to all of your dear family and hopefully we will meet again soon on a dancefloor somewhere out there! Jeff

Forge Mountain Cloggers of North Carolina Cloggers Don Sneakers to Shuffle in New Dancers

By Lindsay Lancaster
Times-News Staff Writer

It almost sounds like thunder at the Old Home Place in Mills River, but it's not the weather. Instead, the noise comes from the Forge Mountain Cloggers stomping and stepping along with the beat of the music at their weekly class.

The cloggers, sporting eye-catching Converse shoes that jingle when they step, let out a hoot. Instructor Melissa Orr, who founded Forge Mountain Cloggers four years ago, just told them she's going to put on "Little Red Riding Hood." The song and routine are favorites among the cloggers, who range in age from 5 years old to senior citizens.

A clogging dance usually incorporates footwear with taps. The footwork in the dance enables dancers to beat out the rhythm of the music.

"Basically, you're making music with your feet," says Orr. Clogging, a style of step dancing, originated in the Appalachian Mountains and dates back to the 1700s.

"In the mountains, this is our mountain heritage," Orr says. "We're just trying to bring it back here in the mountains. ... Clogging is something that can be passed down from generation to generation."

The Forge Mountain Cloggers work to preserve the dance's tradition, but they also break some of the clogging stereotypes. Their shoes, outfits and music are all unique.

DANCING IN CONVERSE SHOES

Traditionally clogging has been associated with bluegrass music, old-fashioned frilly dresses and an older crowd.

"Modern clogging today is very different than it was many years ago," says Orr, who's a certified clogging instructor.

It's time to give clogging a chance, urge the Forge Mountain Cloggers.

Clogging in Converse

"Before you even have an opinion about it, watch it," says Orr's daughter, Kendra, 15. "It's not what you think it is."

Gone are the froufrou dresses and matching men's outfits. Each of the Forge Mountain Cloggers wear a team T-shirt with shorts or jeans.

"To me, the footwork is more important than the look," Melissa says.

And bring on the Converse.

High top or low top, patterned or solid colors, each clogger purchases their own style of Converse shoes for clogging.

Orr and husband, Bryan, attach the taps to the shoes for their students. The dancers sport shoes in glittery gold, light and hot pink, orange, yellow with fluorescent green and pink laces, plaid and more.

"It just kind of really sets apart each individual personality of the dancers," Melissa says. "They're unique."

Not to mention, the shoes are comfortable and fashionable.

"They're cooler looking than the regular ones," says Melissa's son, Levi, 13.

MORE THAN MOUNTAIN MUSIC

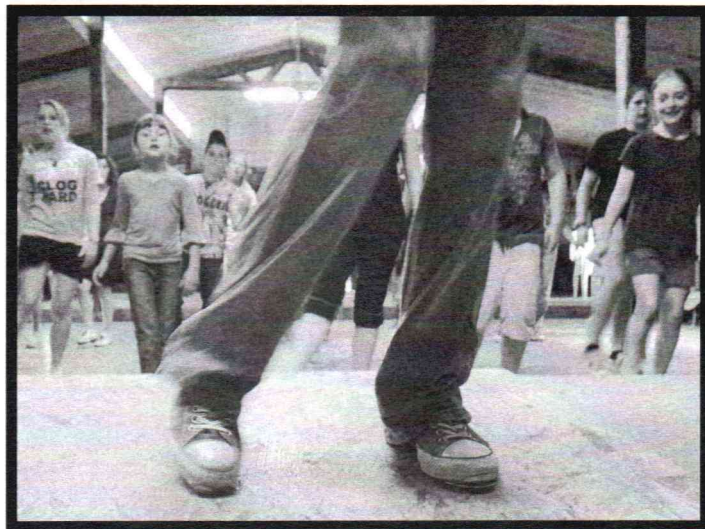

The Forge Mountain Cloggers dance to all kinds of music, including pop, country, rock, gospel — and songs like Elvis' "All Shook Up," the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band's "Fishing in the Dark" and Bob Seger's "Old Time Rock 'n' Roll."

Kendra and her brother, Levi, enjoy clogging to pop music like "Poker Face" or other songs frequently heard on the radio.

"We try to mix it up and do everything just so there is something for everybody," Melissa says.

The dancers often perform as a team in exhibitions each year and at clogging conventions, community events, nursing homes and at the state fair.

In a recent homeschoolers' talent show, Kendra clogged to "Life is a Highway" by Rascal Flatts.

Twin boys Conner and Hayden McAbee, 13, plan to perform the clogging routine "Little Red Riding Hood" June 8 at Rugby Middle School. If you go, you might tell them apart by their clogging shoes: Conner wears blue and green Converse and Hayden wears neon orange ones.

The routine is a favorite among cloggers, including Mackenzie Keel, 11, of Fletcher. Keel's been clogging for about a year.

"It's fun, you get to do fun songs," Keel says. "It just sounds cool."

Says Conner: "It's really easy to pick up."

Hadyn likes that clogging is a way to express himself. Rudd Orr, 12, agrees: "There's like so many cool moves."

And although females outnumber the males — out of roughly 70 dancers, nine of them are males — the guys know clogging isn't just for women.

"It's a man's sport," Hadyn says.

BURSTING AT THE SEAMS

Melissa and her daughter, Kendra, began clogging when Kendra was 9.

"We just fell in love with the dance," Melissa says. "You never run out of things to learn."

Four years ago, Melissa, who homeschools her children, decided to begin a clogging group for homeschool students. The group started out in the barn at her Mills River home. But the group continued to grow and soon had to find space to accommodate all the dancers, which expanded to include children who attend public schools. The cloggers moved to the Old Homeplace in Mills River at the end of 2008.

"The atmosphere of the barn is just really cool," Melissa says. And the whole Orr family, Melissa, husband Bryan, and children Kendra, 15, Levi, 13, and Rudd, 12, clog. Kendra hopes to attend Mars Hill College when she graduates and try out for the school's award-winning Bailey Mountain Cloggers.

She's hooked on the dance.

"I like the challenge," Kendra says. "I like being able to dance to the music I want to."

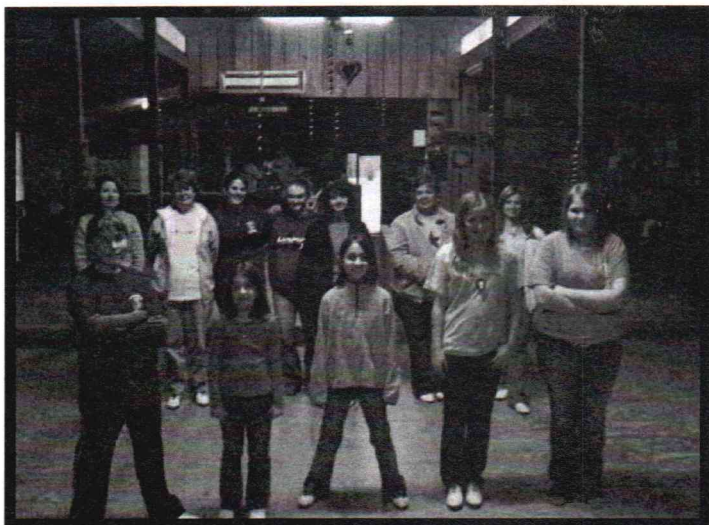

Ashley Whitaker, 16, of Fairview, likes the fitness aspect of clogging.

"It's great exercise and it's fun to be around other kids," Whitaker says.

If you question how much exercise you get from the dance, give it a try.

"It's a sport, as well," Melissa says. "It works every muscle in your body."

GLUING ON TAPS

from the original SHOE GOO website

Some manufacturers make glue on taps without nail holes. If your taps have nail holes, you must first turn the taps over and cover these holes with small rounds of tape so the glue does not bleed through. Also put tape over the back of the rivets so that the glue does not "freeze" them, or come through. Lay the taps on the shoe and draw an outline to know where to work and to glue.

To glue taps on, clean shoe sole of any debris. Roughen the sole of the shoe inside the tap outlines drawn on shoe and apply glue to those areas. Tip: Whatever glue you use, be sure to allow the full curing time. Glue will not hold properly if disturbed before the full setting time has elapsed. The taps should be cured at room temperature. Surface should be clean, dry and free of dirt. For best results, roughen surface before use. Best when used between 70°F (21°C) and 85°F (29°C).

Puncture seal at the top of the tube using the pointer cap.

Always test a small area to ensure proper application technique and dry time. Prolonged exposure to warm water may cause discoloration and possible loss of adhesion when exposed to chemicals used in hot tubs and pools especially in outdoor locations. May be weakened by contact with certain highly plasticized materials.

Apply SHOE GOO directly to both the shoe surface and the back of the tap. Allow SHOE GOO to partially cure, 2-10 minutes, before bringing surfaces together. SHOE GOO hardens by solvent evaporation and forms an immediate bond that is difficult to reposition after both adhesive-coated surfaces are placed in contact with each other and sufficient pressure is exerted to establish full contact.

Allow the glued on taps to dry for 24 hours. Various materials will require different drying times. Cure time increases with lower temperatures and decreases with higher temperatures. Depending on the materials and the temperature, maximum strength may not be reached for 48 to 72 hours.

Keep threads at the neck of the tube free of SHOE GOO residue. To ensure easy cap removal, apply a thin coat of petroleum jelly to the threads of the tube before replacing the cap.

Clean uncured adhesive with small amounts of acetone and paint thinner. The adhesive will ball up and brush off. Cured material may be removed by cutting or scraping.

Store unused SHOE GOO at room temperature with cap tightened.

NOTE: SHOE GOO may damage finished surfaces. Avoid such contact until SHOE GOO is completely dry.

Clogging falls in step across America

by freelance writer Mary Ellen Hunt
Reprinted with permission from the San Francisco Chronicle Thursday, April 30, 2009

Afternoon sunlight pours through the windows of ODC's Shotwell studios as Ian Enriquez's clogging class thunders away in the first-floor studio.

Sweating and intently focused, the dozen or so dancers track his moves and repeat them. Any misstep will be plainly heard, but the class - which is peppered with students from all age groups - pounds gamely away at the wooden floor to the not-exactly bluegrass strains of "Let's Hear It for the Boy."

Clad simply in jeans and a blue T-shirt, Enriquez shouts instructions amid this racket via a Janet Jackson-style headset.

"Triple brush, Utah ... turning Utah ... donkey ... McNamara..." The dancers dip and bob, hands floating in the air as they keep the rhythm going, "Triple toe ... double pull ..."

Although it sounds less like a dance style and more like something you call a plumber for, clogging enjoys an enthusiastic following, with thousands of dancers participating in more than 600 clubs across the United States.

With roots in Irish and English folk dancing and some similarities to tap dance, American clogging is an amalgam of European, Cherokee and African influences, all of which converged in the Appalachians where clogging first sprang up as a social dance primarily accompanied by bluegrass music.

Jeans and T-shirts are the dance clothes of choice, but the students are quick to note that clogging doesn't require special gear or costumes or even shoes. Most of the students seem to be in comfortable footwear to which they've glued the double taps that give clogging its distinctive ring. Another student has taps attached to a pair of sneakers.

"Clogging tends to attract people in their 30s and 40s," says Enriquez, who also directs the Barbary Coast Cloggers, a professional, all-male group that is scheduled to perform at the San Francisco Ethnic Dance Festival in June. "It's definitely a devoted group. We have people who've been coming to the class for years, who have become hard-core dancers. We try to make everyone feel welcome."

The guys who perform in the Barbary Coast Cloggers ensemble, Enriquez says, have a wide range of day jobs: therapists, school principals, vice presidents of ad agencies, even police officers. For some of the students, getting the chance to be in the company is the incentive, but for others, just being able to dance is the point.

Berkeley psychologist Donald McKillop says that clogging is just the sort of right-brained activity he needed to balance out his left-brained academic tendencies. Even though it's been a particular challenge, he says, "One thing that keeps your brain from going south as we age is to do things on your nondominant side. And it's also a lesson in humility."

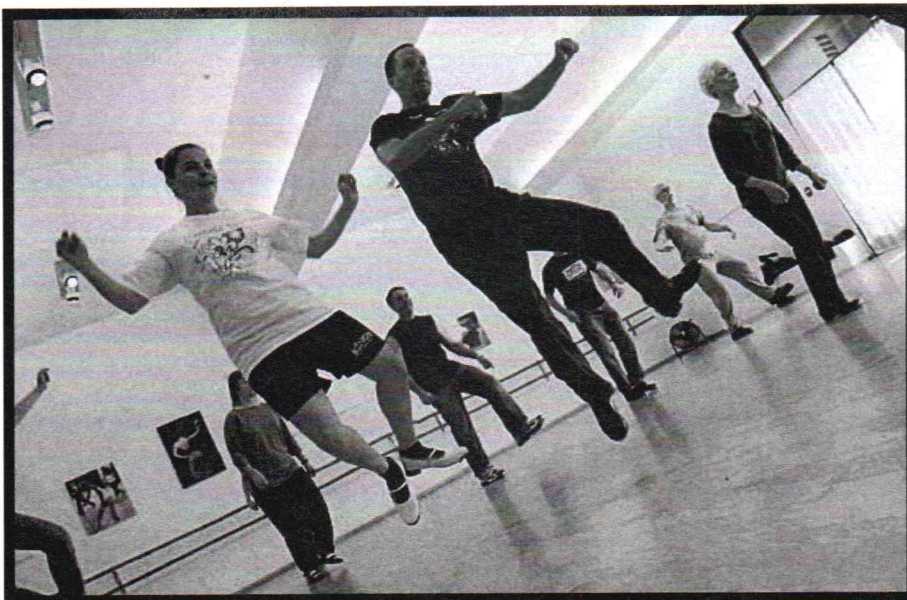

Dancing for the soul

McKillop credits dancing with helping him through the difficult breakup of a long-term relationship.

Clogging Falls In Step

When I finally got the courage to end it, I was facing a pretty bleak social future. Being single is hard, but being old and single is particularly hard. But I have not only had the joy of dancing and improving my dancing, I've met people who are very genuine and caring. There's always something to talk about and something to do together. As you can tell, dancing has been a godsend to me during this tough time in my life."

During the break, folks are trying out new steps while chatting companionably. The class has moved onto specialized work for the advanced dancers, and the music - which, in Enriquez's class, is as likely to be Rihanna or Gwen Stefani as bluegrass - blares out from the stereo.

There's a whiff of hip-hop about Enriquez's brand of clogging, and students are bobbing their heads as they watch their more advanced compatriots work on a complicated sequence. "It inspires us to hope we'll get good enough to perform," says Ming-Lun Ho, who took up dance as a graduate student at Berkeley.

Now on the math faculty at Chabot College, Ho recalls nervously walking hallways and tapping and kicking before exams, and he realized that there could be an outlet for those noisy feet. "I like to play percussion with my feet; I like the rhythm, the mathematical logic."

Jeff Porter, who has danced with the Barbary Coast Cloggers, says that clogging, with its vocabulary of thousands of steps, can look daunting.

Can-do spirit

"I first saw cloggers at the Stompede at the Sundance Saloon," he continues dryly. "It didn't look like anything I could do."

But Porter, who was already doing other forms of folk dancing, started taking classes just so he could have an extra night of dancing. "The more I did it, the more fun it became. At first, it was strictly recreational, but as it became more challenging, I found this real love for it, a passion for pursuing it."

Thunderous rhythmic rolls echo through the building as a dozen dancers stomp enthusiastically on the wooden floor. Enriquez pauses to give a few steps, and although it's in English, it might as well be wartime code. "Four crazy legs and two turkeys ... a long pigeon."

Cloggers have cue sheets, but for the classes, the students don't read the sequences, they memorize them piece by piece and perform the steps as the "cuer" calls them.

"Burton Joey, Rock Burton, Rock Burton, Burton Joey ..." Enriquez says in a sort of mysterious haiku.

"Called dances like clogging really take concentration," says Porter. "You have to be in the moment, you can't be thinking about laundry or groceries."

"I felt totally spastic going into the first couple of classes," says Carolyn Jayne, an elementary school music teacher and one of the founding members of the Golden Gate Clogging Company, a co-ed counterpart to the Barbary Coast Cloggers. "It was like a foreign language to my muscles. I thought, 'Gosh, how have I even been moving this body for 40 years?'

"But," she continues, "they're so patient with beginners, with the awkwardness that comes from trying to get a new technique. The emphasis is on 'Yes, you can do this.'

"It's just so joyous. It is just such fun to express yourself with your body - and, after a while, the body just knows what to do without the intervention of the brain."

Clogging gear

Instructor Ian Enriquez suggests that you try a class or two before investing in clogging taps. When you're ready, here are a few choices from Enriquez and Golden Gate Clogging Company's Carolyn Jayne:

- Glue the taps onto regular sturdy shoes with Shoe Goo.
- For leather-soled shoes, you can have taps screwed directly onto the sole.
- Two types of taps: regular clog taps, which are very similar to tap dance taps, and jingle taps, which are two metal pieces riveted loosely together. One side is attached to the sole and the other side jingles freely against it.

Foot Notes

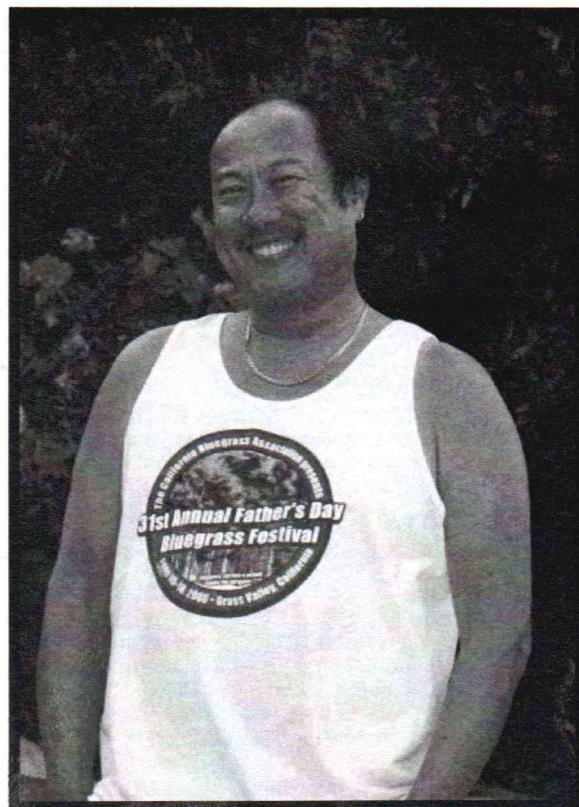

Douglas M. Chin

June 23, 1959 - July 5, 2009

Northern California lost a terrific clogger and friend on July 5, 2009 with the passing of Doug Chin. Here, some of his friends share their memories of this gentle soul and his great smile, hearty laughter, and happy and caring nature. Growing up in Oakland, Doug learned the skills of machine work, and became a quality control inspector. He also graduated from the California Culinary College in San Francisco. His greatest love, however, was his over 25 years of association with the clogging community and the Barbary Coast Cloggers. Doug is survived by his parents Donald and Joyce Chin of Oakland, siblings Julie Alsing and Darryl Chin, and an extended family of many relatives and wonderful friends. A memorial service was held in Oakland in July.

Lois Elling California

I first met Doug Chin about 1979. He was just 19 or 20 years old and eager to do as much clogging as he could. That's one thing about him that never changed, his love of clogging. We shared an interest in photography and he also loved cooking. Doug always had a smile on his face and was too busy having fun to ever be unkind to anyone. He supported all the clogging events in Northern California and surrounding areas whenever he could and was always on the dance floor until the very end.

Doug danced first with the Young Rebels in Oakland, then also with the Diablo Mountain Cloggers, the Blossom Hill Cloggers, Hillbilly Cloggers, and the Barbary Coast Cloggers.

He's left behind many friends who are in shock. He had just performed with the Barbary Coast Cloggers at the San Francisco Ethnic Dance Festival in June and celebrated his 50th birthday. Doug made it possible for me to finish my SoFoBoMo project by generously loaning me his Canon 20D camera when mine died.

Thanks for your smile and friendship, Doug. You will be missed.

Doug Chin was a remarkable man. Aside from an exceptional sense of rhythm that made him a great dancer, he cared deeply about performing as a strong ensemble. He understood the power of unison and precision.

Doug was a tremendous asset to Barbary Coast Cloggers for many years, but even more so to the larger dance community throughout the region. He led the renowned Young Rebels and also danced with the Hillbilly Cloggers and many other ensembles.

I personally appreciated his work ethic, sense of responsibility, and how passionately he urged all of the members to focus on continuous improvement so they could contribute to the ensemble as a whole. He offered insight on how to work with a group over a long period of time in a way that emphasized quality, consistency, and showmanship.

Peace be with you. I'm honored to have danced with you at workshops over the years. Thanks for sharing so much of yourself with your clogging family. We will all dearly miss your charisma and beaming smile on and off the dance floor.

Juniper Clickin'

Oregon Event Celebrates Another Successful Year

by Lezlee Moultrie, Oregon
Independent Clogging Reporter

Reviews by workshop-goers are in on the 6th Annual Juniper Clickin' Cloggers Workshop held in April at the Jefferson City Fairgrounds in Madras, Oregon, and the consensus is that it was a great event whose key ingredients for success were a warm welcome, friendliness, camaraderie, a sense of community and sharing, and lots of fun at an affordable price!

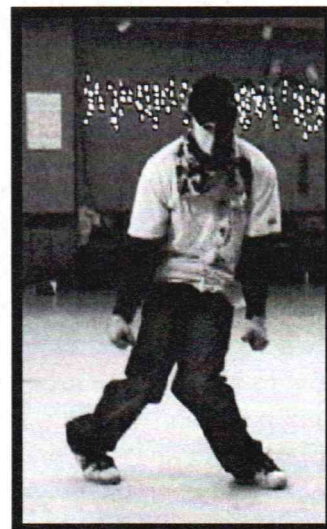

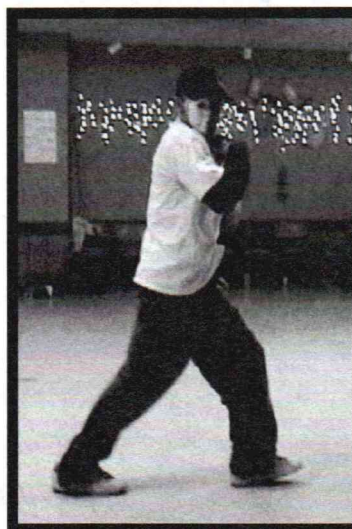

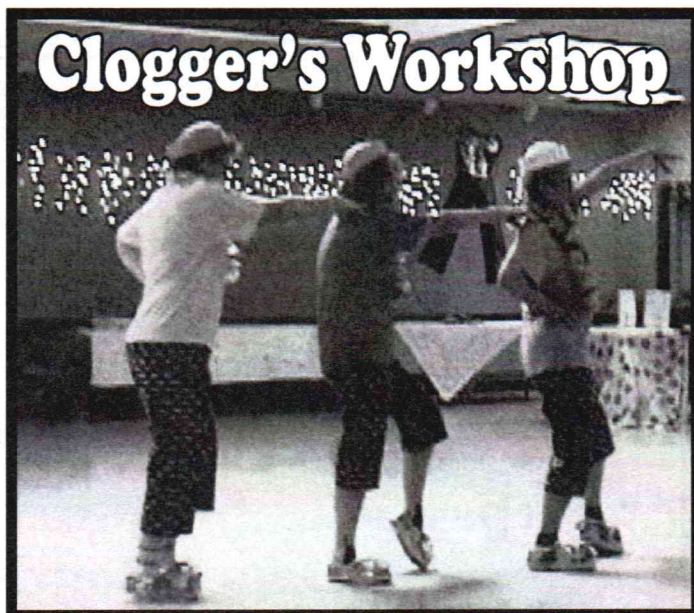

More than 60 attended the yearly event, hosted by instructor Jan McDonald. "It comes natural to Juniper Clickin' Cloggers to make their clogging guests feel part of their clogging family." McDonald said. McDonald and her dancers feel that this ingredient alone is critical to the workshop's success and to any other workshop. If you come by yourself, this group will take you "under it's wing" and you won't be alone. The group promises that you'll have fun no matter what!

Making new friends and learning great routines in a relaxed environment is what the Juniper Clickin' Workshop is all about. Northwest instructors for the event included Mike McDow, Mary Bray, Jan McDonald, and Lezlee Moultrie of Oregon, Mary Dart, Diane Jacobsen, Anne Mills, and Kay Velmire of Washington state, and MaryAnn Walker from Idaho.

The Friday night fun dance featured kids from Weiser, Idaho with clogging instructor MaryAnn Walker. These kids (ages 7-12) are a vibrant and happy addition to any workshop environment. To celebrate the event, the dancers hold a big pizza party with great homemade cookies! The kids performed an exhibition routine that is always a joy to watch, and each year MaryAnn brings a new set of kids. Our youth is our clogging future that will carry on the clogging tradition.

Saturday, workshops ran from 9:00 am to 4:30 pm featuring the talented staff and offering routines in all musical styles and dance levels from easy and intermediate through advanced.

Workshop goers also got the opportunity to take advantage of the many recreational activities, such as fishing and hiking, as well as the dining and shopping that make central Oregon such a great place to come and clog.

Middle: Young Dancers from Idaho bring a smile to everyone's faces with their energy and enthusiasm for clogging.

Practice Music & Cued Routines for Clogging

This CD contains 4 great old time bluegrass songs that will get your hands clappin' and your toes tappin'. Old Joe Clark is recorded with a starting tempo that is very slow, then every 64 beats there is an 8 beat tempo change that speeds the music up just a little. This is a great track for teaching beginner classes, working on new steps or styling. Old Joe Clark is also included in a full tempo version.

The other tracks on this CD project are renditions and medleys of old time tunes with routines choreographed by Jeff Driggs of West Virginia and Naomi Pyle of Indiana. Cue sheets for these dances are included in this insert.

2009 Double Toe Times Choreographer's Contest Deadline Extended!

Do you write your own routines and want to share them with your fellow cloggers? The Double Toe Times magazine of clogging is the place to have your choreographer seen by hundreds of clogging teachers and thousands of dancers! To showcase choreographers, the Double Toe Times magazine is sponsoring another choreography contest! Routines may be submitted through December 31, 2009 and the winner will be announced in the January 2010 issue of the Double Toe Times and will receive a $100 American Express gift card plus a free year's subscription to the Double Toe Times.

Entering is easy. Send your cuesheets to us at doubletoetimes@aol.com or mail them to us at P. O. Box 1352, St. Albans, WV 25177 postmarked by December 31, 2009.

Rules:

1. Cuesheets you send must be choreography you have written yourself or have co-written. It cannot be from another choreographer.
2. Routines submitted may be considered for publication in an upcoming Double Toe Times issue. Routines sent cannot have been printed in the Double Toe Times magazine in the past.
3. You may enter as many routines as you like. Each routine sent is another chance to win. Each submission enters you in the contest and the winner will be drawn at random.
4. Emailed cuesheets must be in Word format or PDF

This is your year to win! Send in your choreography today and look to future issues for more news, cues, contests and great clogging info!
