To the Readers Oh My Stars!

Okay, either you love it, you ignore it or you hate it, but I watch "Dancing with the Stars,"... sometimes.

The thing I find more intriguing than the garish outfits, the sometimes reaching back-stories and the temperamental judges is how much I can relate the celebrities situations when being thrust into a ballroom boot camp to my own clogging experiences and I can see myself and many of my own students through the exercise. Maybe you have seen these people in your classes.

The aging star who yearns for the attention of the teacher and the judges and the audience but can't always find the strength to go the distance but makes it up in heart.

The young person who had everything handed to them and breezes through dances with boundless energy and brash responses to criticism but little technique or discipline, until they find themselves at the bottom of the tally and then -- sometimes too late -- realize that a little humility goes a long way.

The child of celebrity whose parent made a name for themselves, but the child is forever in the shadows. Always compared to the elder, they either rise to claim their own identity or flounder under the scrutiny.

The athlete, the one who has the physical attributes to excel, the stamina to succeed and the training and discipline to stay the course, but often not the rhythm to perform despite all of their advantages.

The diva who is only in the game for the attention and barely lasts through the first rehearsal and just enough to make it to that important first performance. They gladly step aside after their moment in the spotlight and blame everyone for their lack of success except themselves, or try to cast off and start their own reality show.

Then there is the dark horse. The one who surprises everyone by quietly rising to the top through hard work, dedication and perseverance. Sometimes we are so caught up in the swirl of all of the others we don't even see them until they blow us away with their talent and we look at each other and say, "Where did that come from?"

Who'd have thought there were so many of our students to be found on Dancing with the Stars. You've seen them too haven't you?

"Talking Feet" Creator Dies at 75

Mike Seeger Leaves a Legacy of Musical and Dance Preservation and History

For over fifty years, Mike Seeger was a musician, documenter, and tireless advocate of the early folk and traditional musics and dances of the USA. His love for traditional songs and tunes inspired many other musicians - including Bob Dylan - to look for the rural roots of American music. Seeger, who produced the defining documentary on traditional dance stylings "Talking Feet" died of cancer August 7 at his home in Lexington, Va. He was 75.

The younger half brother of folk musician Pete Seeger and part of a renowned musical family, Mr. Seeger dedicated his life to documenting, teaching and keeping alive traditional music and dance of the American South.

A singer and an instrumentalist, he was once described as a "one-man folk festival." He played banjo, fiddle, guitar, autoharp, jew's-harp, quills, dulcimer, mandolin and harmonica, and recorded extensively on Folkways Records and Smithsonian Folkways Recordings. He made a number of recordings in the 1950s and 1960s as a member of the folk revival ensemble the New Lost City Ramblers.

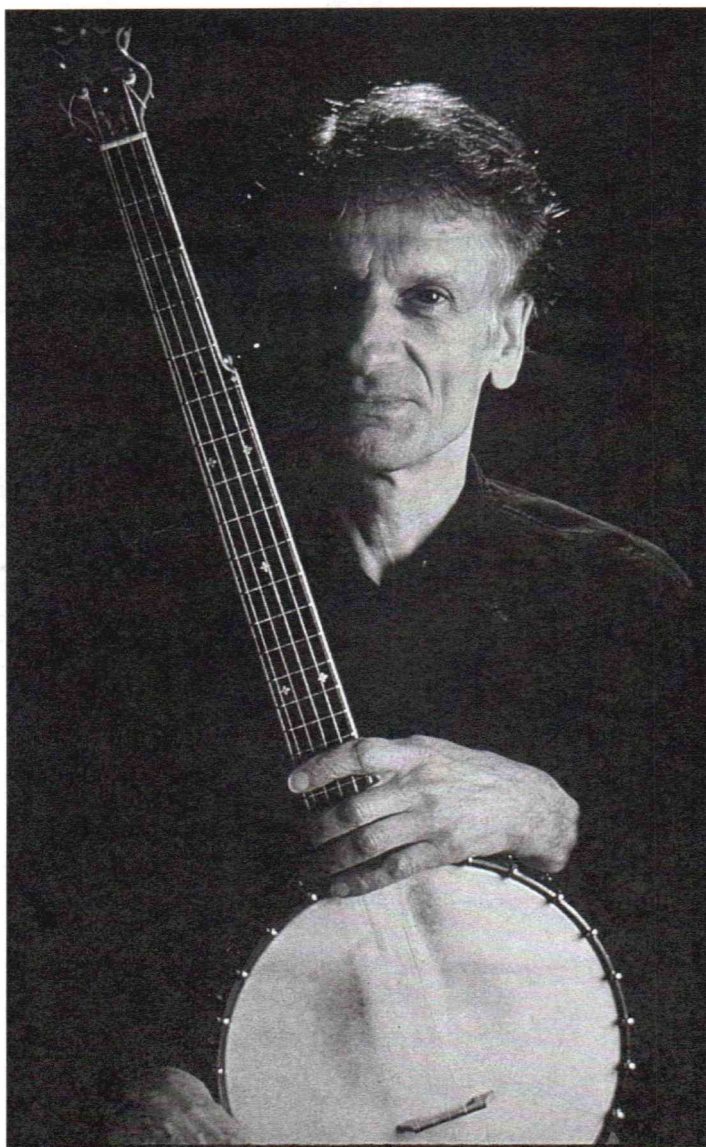

Talking Feet is the first documentary to feature flatfoot, buck, hoedown, and rural tap dancing, the styles of solo Southern dancing which are a companion to traditional old-time music and on which modern clog dancing is based. Featuring 24 traditional dancers videotaped on location in West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia, and North Carolina.

The film project grew into the 1992 book Talking Feet: Solo Southern Dance of the Appalachian, Piedmont and Blue Ridge Mountain Regions, by Mike Seeger with notes by Ruth Pershing.

"Talking Feet is a film about a forgotten side of American dance culture: solo mountain dancing. Mike Seeger and Ruth Pershing take us to the southeastern mountains of the U. S., the source of this genre, and to a range of individuals (old, young, black, white, female and male) who grew up with the idea of talking with their feet. The film captures the deep sense of tradition and the value of freedom of expression these dancers share. Talking Feet is an exploration of a dance form rich in American do-it-yourself pride," said Frank Hall, dancer, a noted dance anthropologist.

The documentary shone a light on the musicality of traditional footwork in its purest forms. "Once we started meeting more and more people in different parts of the mountain areas it really opened up what we could do and how we heard the music and reacted to it. . . . They were beating out the rhythms with their feet and really paying a lot of attention to the changing of the phrasing of the music, rather than executing 'precision' steps and trying to do high kicks,” said Rodney Sutton of The Green Grass Cloggers and The Fiddle Puppets. Ira Bernstein, a percussive step dancer and researcher, described the project as “...a wonderful and enlightening illustration of the breadth of Southern-style dancers, including their humor, playfulness, technical abilities, soul and sheer joy.”

Michael Seeger was born Aug. 15, 1933, in New York. His father, Charles Seeger, was an ethnomusicologist who once headed the folklore and ethnomusicology department at UCLA; his mother, Ruth Crawford Seeger, was a noted composer and folk song collector.

Mr. Seeger and his two sisters grew up immersed in music.

In 1935, the family moved to Chevy Chase when Charles Seeger took a position with the Works Progress Administration in the Roosevelt administration. “Exciting people were always dropping in,” Mike Seeger’s sister Peggy, who also became a prominent folk singer, told Folkways Magazine. “Lead Belly, Woody Guthrie, John Jacob Niles, Bess Hawes, Henry and Sidney Cowell, John and Alan Lomax, Lee Hays, composers and writers . . . and, of course, beloved Pete, our tall exotic half-brother, with his long, long-necked banjo and his big, big feet stamping at the end of his long, long legs.”

In high school, Mr. Seeger left Chevy Chase for an alternative school in Vermont and at age 18 began teaching himself to play stringed instruments. He and Peggy were soon playing for square dances. At about 20, he began collecting songs on a tape recorder from traditional musicians he encountered in the Washington area.

In 1958, Seeger formed the New Lost City Ramblers with fellow traditional music enthusiasts John Cohen and Tom Paley. The Ramblers came together with “the explicit intention of performing American folk music as it had sounded before the inroads of radio, movies and television had begun to homogenize out diverse regional folkways,” said Jeff Place, head archivist for the Smithsonian’s folklife collections.

Relying primarily on Library of Congress field recordings and 78 rpm “old time” records from the 1920s and 1930s, the Ramblers revived a vast repertoire of songs and playing styles by such groups as Gid Tanner and his Skillet Lickers and Ernest Stoneman and his Blue Ridge Corn Shuckers.

The Ramblers also modernized the repertoire with their own compositions, including a mock-patriotic ditty called “If George Washington Slept in All the Places He Said He Did, It’s No Wonder He’s the Father of Our Country.” The Ramblers continued to play, with occasional periods of inactivity, into the 1990s.

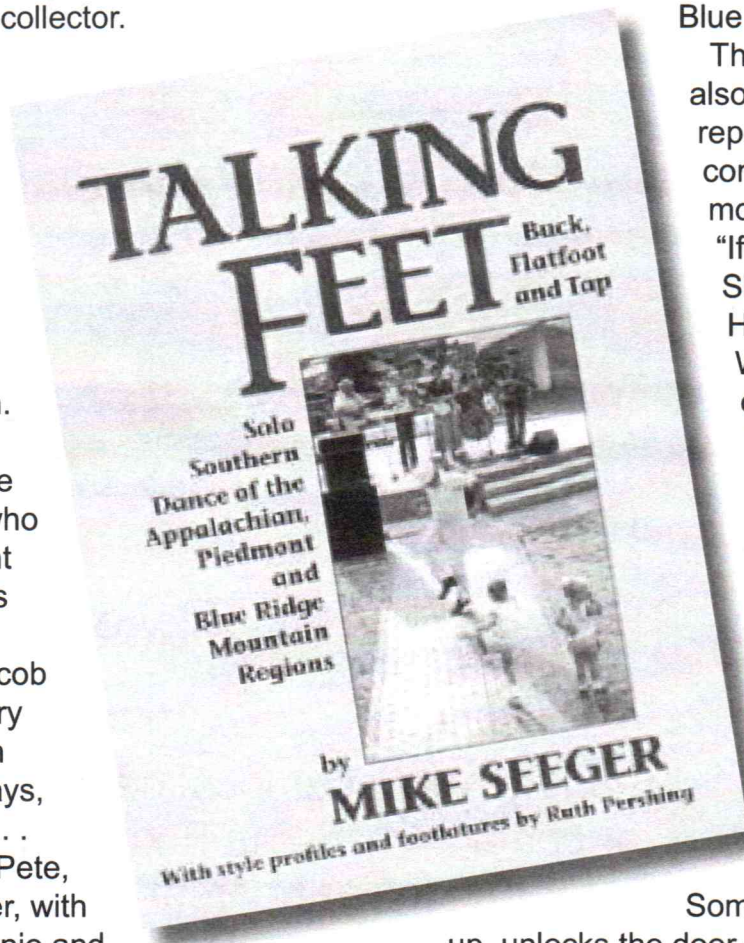

Mr. Seeger influenced a number of musicians, including the young Bob Dylan. “Sometimes you know things have to change. . . .

Somebody holds the mirror up, unlocks the door and your head has to go into a different place,” Dylan wrote in his 2004 memoir, “Chronicles: Volume One.” “Mike Seeger had that effect on me. He played on all the various planes, the full index of the old-time styles, [and] he played these songs as good as it was possible to play them. What I had to work at, Mike already had in his genes.”

Mr. Seeger produced 36 documentary recordings and 51 recordings of his own, including "Tipple, Loom and Rail" (1966), a collection of songs about coal mines, cotton mills and railroads, and his Grammy-nominated "Solo: Old-Time Country Music" (1991). His "Retrograss" (1999), produced in collaboration with David Grisman and John Hartford, recast rock-and-roll songs by Chuck Berry and the Beatles into old-time musical styles.

Mr. Seeger was nominated for six Grammy Awards and, shortly before his death, received the Bess Lomax Hawes National Heritage Fellowship Award from the National Endowment for the Arts.

As he explained at the beginning of a performance at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., in April 2003, Mike didn't think of the songs he played as "covers." Instead, he regarded them as "classic, old time, traditional folk songs" that are constantly open to reinterpretation. In a piece on his website entitled "What is Old Time Music?" Seeger lamented the lack of recognition that the description "old time" music gets from the general public, in contrast to "bluegrass" or "country," for example. While these generic labels work well enough to describe familiar musical genres, Mike discovered that his own music required him to "take a minute to describe the place and time that [the] music existed in and now exists in." To Mike, music was not merely an aesthetically pleasurable experience but also a rich vehicle for history.

Joe Wilson, himself a recipient of the Bess Lomax Hawes NEA National Heritage Fellowship, says, "It was Mike who said to a generation of musicians, 'dig a little deeper.' His contributions as an advocate of great artists who had been ignored will shine for generations to come; he is our teacher in inclusiveness, the one always willing to put others before himself, to say 'You need to hear this.'"

23rd Annual KICK-OFF 2009

Yearly Event Teaches Unexpected Lesson in Living Each Day to Fullest

By Lezlee Moultrie
Independent Clogging Reporter

Clogging instructor and workshop coordinator Anne Mills can always be counted on to put together a first-rate clogging event, but sometimes it is the simple and unplanned things that occur at an event that make it a very, very special time of fellowship and give us stories that become very dear to us..

This was the case at the 23rd annual Kick Off Workshop held in Tacoma, Washington. Dancers gathered to enjoy three halls of workshop by Anne's capable staff, including Barry Welch, Matt Ellinger, Barb Guenette, Janice Jestin, Cheri Posedel, Alberta Stamp, Susan Woods, Kay Velmire and from Canada, Kerri Orthner and Darolyn Pchajek.

Cloggers trust Anne to provide a 'top-of-the-line' facility for dancing and she always does it! The clogger is always number one in her mind when she plans an event and the dancers respond with ongoing support for her and her workshops. That's just the way it works. Anne sets a very high standard which includes a terrific staff that work well together as a team. They work especially hard to make you feel welcome and trust me they definitely succeed at that! Way to go everybody!

However, it's not just about clogging - It's also about the "stories." Let Me Explain... Workshops are unique in the fact that they bring lots of people from all walks of life together in a setting that promotes happiness, camaraderie, and family -- clogging family that is -- this story begins like this...

One of the instructors taught a couples dance at this year's Kick-Off Workshop. At the Saturday Night Fun Dance this instructor was asked by a fellow clogger if she would cue it. This is the special part. She was asked by the dancer if she could please dedicate this dance to her sister who has cancer.

This might be the last time the two sisters would be able to dance together to something they both love doing, clogging. The instructor so moved by this, made her announcement and the two sisters emerged onto the dance floor hand-in-hand to dance together with smiles on their faces. It's stories like these that make workshops special. It's like coming home again to spend time with your Clogging Family. Life is short, live every moment as if it was your last and dance while you can!

GEORGIA AGRIRAMA

Clogging Event makes it to Silver Anniversary and Celebrates 25 Years before the Last Dance

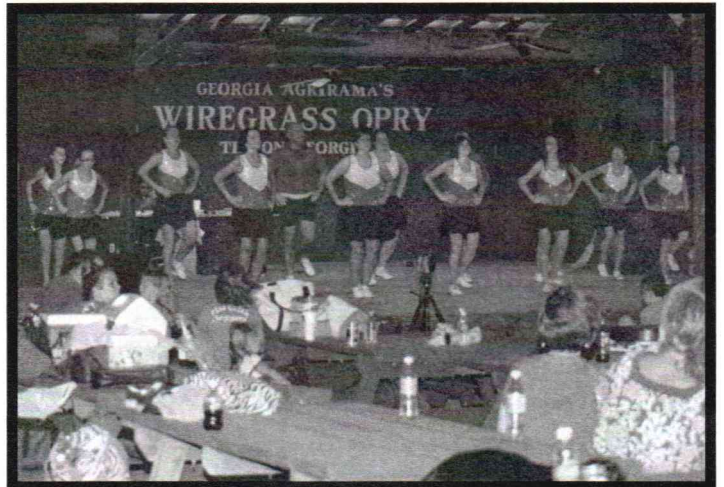

Brian Law, Director
Sudden Impact Cloggers
Adel, Georgia

For the past 25 years the Georgia Agrirama Clogging Hoedown has drawn crowds from all of Georgia and Florida to Georgia's Living History Museum and Village, the Georgia Agrirama in Tifton, Georgia. Located on I 75 at exit 63B in South Georgia, the event took to the outside amphitheatre stage called the Wiregrass Opry on the third Saturday in September. Clogging teams from all over Georgia and Florida have kicked up their heels and entertained each different yearly theme for 25 years. Due to budget cuts the Agrirama had to cut several events. This event was slated to be cut last year when, Brian Law, Director of Sudden Impact Cloggers and host of the event talked Agrirama Marketing into making it one more year to celebrate 25 years.

The event began in an old gym in Tift County 25 years ago by Tommy and Jean Hasty who directed the Kountry Kloggers of Tifton. The 2nd year it was moved to the Georgia Agrirama and has continued on this stage. The Hastys directed the event in conjunction with Agrirama marketing that provided public relations, concessions and staff to collect money and operate the sound from 1984 to 1993. In 1993 Pam Brown who took over the Kountry Kloggers as director ran the event until 1997. After giving up Kountry Kloggers, a dancer on the team directed the group for one year and ran the event in 1998. Law took over to save the event which he calls one of his team's favorite venues. "We always looked forward to this event each year, and I hated to see it end when the Kountry Kloggers disbanded. Therefore, I agreed to take over the contract. Law ran the event from 1999 to 2009.

Each year Law added a different theme to the event and sold souvenir t-shirts with the theme and all performing teams listed on the shirt. "I have 12 hoedown t-shirts from the past 12 years all with different themes and colors. We were running out of colors," Law said. After each year, Law would begin thinking of the theme for next year and which color and design would be depicted. He also recruited new teams to perform as his team traveled around Georgia and Florida. Some teams returned each year and some had conflicts, but Law always kept a full schedule from 5PM to 10PM each year. Each year the traditional Ol' Fashioned Broom Dance was held in the middle of the event which allowed audience participation to step on stage and get the feeling of what it is like to entertain. The dance is much like musical chairs where someone gets to dance with the broom when the music stops. "Last year for the 24th year we had "Two Dozen Grade A Years: A Harvest of Clogging" and featured a Cloggerama Idol contest where we had 3 judges much like the American Idol show. This year's event depicted "A Silver Anniversary and Last Dance" and concluded with the traditional clogging where each team joined in for a "rise n shine" and circled up to Soldier's Joy that Law choreographed for the event and sent each team a que sheet to learn. Just before the event turned the stage lights out for the final time, each team was invited back to do one number for the "Last Dance".

Law said he was just not himself this year as it was sad to see this event end. "I can remember this was the place that I decided that I wanted to clog when I used to visit the event with my grandparents every year. I began attending in 1985 and we went every year. When I was 14 and sitting in the audience wishing I could clog, I never dreamed of being the coordinator/director of this event." Law began clogging as a freshman in College at Abraham Baldwin College as an ABAC Clogger just 4 years later. Ironically, the college is located just down the street from the Agrirama. After each team performed, Law said he saw visions of himself sitting in the audience along with his late granny and his papa wondering if others were hoping to one day clog just as he did. It was a sad goodbye, but with a positive outcome for him and his dancers who carried on the tradition for as long as the economy would allow. Law says, "All good things must come to an end, but clogging is still a favorite performance art in America and I was glad to be a part of preserving this history at this historic museum."
