footprint Eye of the Tiger Mom

The talking heads on the television and radio news and opinion shows are all abuzz over the "Battle Hymn of the Tiger Mom," Yale law professor Amy Chua's proudly politically incorrect account of raising her children "the Chinese way."

The book outlines what she typifies as a traditional Chinese method of parenting that does not accept a grade lower than an A, insists on hours of math and spelling drills and piano and violin practice each day (weekends and vacations included), not allowing play dates or sleep overs or television or computer games, and -- all the while -- bemoaning the amount of time that American parents allow their children to waste with hours on Facebook and in front of the television or on computer games. The book is an indictment in some's opinion of the poor preparation that many make for their children's futures.

As teachers, we all have a trove of stories about stage mothers and "Tiger Moms" who drive their children incessantly. One of the greatest challenges we face as dance teachers is finding ways to control the environment in which we teach and direct our programs and teams, while being sensitive to parents who have wildly varying ideas and expectations when it comes to their children. What we must learn to accept is that parental oversight is mostly positive and driven by a desire to see their children succeed and be happy. We can certainly close our practices or teaching sessions from parents and spectators, but we cannot completely ostracize parents from the equation.

Communication is the key to dealing with parents, especially those who we see as Tiger Moms. Creating a balance between intensive training and practice and socializing and play time creates bonds between your dancers that promote good teamwork and motivate them to work together.

I grew up with a Mom who insisted on dinners at the table, and would call us in from play time and shoo away the neighbor kids to have family time and games. I used to roll my eyes and, if I had heard of the term Tiger Mom at the time I would have thought it, but it created relationships with my siblings that remain today. As a young adult who would bring friends home in the midst of a family game night, I heard so many comment on how cool it was and that their families never did things together.

Tigers can seem scary and some bite, but hopefully you will learn to work together to make everyone purr. Happy clogging! Jeff Driggs

FONTANA CLOGGING JAMBOREE

Fall Clogging Jamboree Carries on a Grand Tradition

Each year, the crisp Smoky Mountain air is punctuated by the sounds of hundreds of clogging feet as dancers from around the world gather at the annual Fontana Clogging Jamboree at the Fontana Village Resort in Fontana, North Carolina.

Each year, on the last weekend of September, the jamboree bring together many of the United State's top instructors in a weekend that includes two days of workshops, fun dances and live bluegrass music concerts and socials. This past year, the staff included hosts Naomi Pyle of Indiana and Jeff Driggs from West Virginia, along with Scotty Bilz of Georgia, Chip Summey of North Carolina, Barry Welch of California and old time square dance instruction by Rob Pack of Tennessee.

For many, in addition to the stellar staff and breathtaking scenery, one of the true stars of the event is the amazing hardwood floors in the spacious dance hall. The floating wooden floor provides a dance experience that few get to enjoy in our clogging journeys.

Fontana Village is the largest resort in the Smoky Mountains, hosting guests from throughout the region and around the world with a range of outdoor activities and easy access to the most visited national park in the nation—Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

After WWII, Fontana Village Resort opened as the largest premier vacation destination east of the Continental Divide. Built in the workers constructing the Tennessee Valley Authority's flood control dam system along the Tennessee River, Fontana is the last TVA "village" still standing; a vestige of Appalachian architecture, history and culture.

1940's as a community for the 5,000

The gathering at the end of September each year is a testament to the place that this resort holds in the history of modern clogging. As a young man, Bill Nichols, of Walhalla,

South Carolina, worked at the North Carolina mountain resort of Fontana Village, where national square-dancing exhibitions are held.

Upon his arrival in the village in 1956, he, his wife and their four children often gave clogging exhibitions for the visiting dancers. Predictably, everyone wanted to learn the lively, noisy dance.

Nichols taught the square dancers, many of whom then taught clogging to folk-dancing enthusiasts back in their hometowns. Nichols taught "Big" John Walters of Atlanta, who is credited with instructing first daughter Amy Carter in clogging, and Violet Marsh, who founded the National Clogging and Hoedown Council in 1970.

According to Nichols, Walters and Marsh are largely responsible for spreading the popularity of this modern style and terminology of clogging. It was during his time at Fontana that Nichols began to research the history of Appalachian clogging and began working with Western North Carolina University to develop a standardized vocabulary for the mountain dance. Others, like Sheila Popwell of Georgia, built upon this early work and published the terminology that is still in use today. Many of clogging's basic steps were also developed or named on the historic floors at Fontana. As you stand on the long front porch of the dance hall, lined by dozens of rocking chairs, it is easy to see where steps like the "Fontana brush" and "rocking chair" came from.

The National Clogging and Hoedown council hosted its annual Fall meeting at Fontana each November and featured evening dances with live music from guests that included Grand Ole Opry members Riders in the Sky. The house band at Fontana, the Fontana Ramblers, featured a young Ronnie Milsap. The N.C.H.C. weekend was followed by a week long jamboree led by cloggers Bobbie and Dewy Paul, of Ohio known as the Smoky Mountain Jamboree. During the 1980's The Possum Trot workshop team, led by JoAnn Gibbs of Georgia, began hosting an Easter weekend event known as the Possum Holler workshop. At its height, over 1,000

OUR FONTANA EXPERIENCE

By: Barbara Elko

Pioneer Cloggers, South Park, PA

On the eve of the workshop several of us cloggers participated in a ghost tour offered by the resort staff. The past history of the dwellings, and the people who lived and worked in Fontana Village, as well as the strange occurrences since that time were discussed. I have never believed in ghostly hauntings but there is something spellbinding about the Fontana Jamboree.

Once you step on the wood floor in the immense recreation center something takes control. Is it a phantom connection with past dancers, or the paramount of attending instructors, who possess your feet? Either way it was a foot stomping good time! Throughout the weekend, life atop the Smoky Mountains included clogging, listening to a live bluegrass band, sitting around campfires, and sharing time with other dancers. The Grass Stains Bluegrass Band from West Virginia, and Drew and Lacey Williams from Nashville Tennessee did an outstanding job entertaining the crowd with their music. Scotty Bilz hustled and taught all of the dancers a routine to Sweet Summer Love, one of Drew and Lacey Williams recorded songs. Barry Welch introduced a bit of waltz in his choreo of Galaxy Song. Anybody familiar with Chip Summey knows he is all about country. Jeff Driggs taught a traditional routine to Doreen. No one comes close to Swingin' like Naomi Pyle! Exhibitions performed by Rhythm N Motion and the Choo Choo Cloggers were explosive. All too soon it was time to make the journey back down the mountain.

FONTANA CLOGGING JAMBOREE

dancers crowded the floor to learn the latest dances and see the best up and coming instructors. It was during one of these Easter weekend workshops that Canadian step dancer Judy Waymouth and her dancers first exhibited at a clogging event and introduced the Ottawa Valley step dance that greatly influenced the style of modern clogging from that point forward.

In the early 1990's, clogging activities at Fontana Village ceased. The village went through ownership changes and renovations, and cloggers who held good memories from Fontana clogging events hoped for a return to the village.

In 2003, clogging instructor Naomi Pyle of Indiana, who had been a dancer and instructor at the past Possum Holler events, approached her friend Jeff Driggs of West Virginia to propose a new clogging jamboree at Fontana. Driggs had been going to Fontana since the late 1970's as a square dancer and then as a clogger and staff member at the N.C.H.C., Smoky Mountain Jamboree and Possum Holler events. The two approached the village and the new Fontana Clogging Jamboree began in 1983. Bill Nichols also hosts a traditional event later in the Fall and has continued his tradition of teaching village guests to clog during the Summer months.

Driggs and Pyle felt it was important in bringing clogging back to Fontana to not only capture the atmosphere and flavor that branded the earlier events, but to pay homage to many of those who played a part in the previous jamborees. During their first jamboree, Bill Nichols, Tandy Barrett, Boo Ruch and Bobbie and Dewey Paul were all on hand to share in the welcome home to Fontana and to be recognized for their contributions to clogging.

Live music has been an important part of the revived Fontana workshop. Each year, a social has been held after the Friday night fun dance with live acoustic music and on Saturday evening, a full scale bluegrass concert is held prior to the evening exhibitions and fun dance. This past year, the Grass Stains Bluegrass Band of West Virginia were featured, along with Drew and Lacey Williams of Nashville, Tennessee. Drew and Lacey recently released a new recording featuring a song entitled "Sweet Summer Love." Instructor Scotty Bilz wrote a fun and easy routine to the song and dancers were delighted to have the opportunity to take to the floor and dance the routine as Drew and Lacey performed the song live. Videos of the live performance have made their way to youtube and facebook, along with many great photos from the events.

Great teams also put on exhibitions at the Fontana Jamboree. The award winning Bailey Mountain Cloggers of nearby Mars Hill College have put on a show there, and the last two years, the Rhythm N Motion Cloggers of Tennessee have been on hand to show the traditional hoedown style that has made them many time national champions in the art.

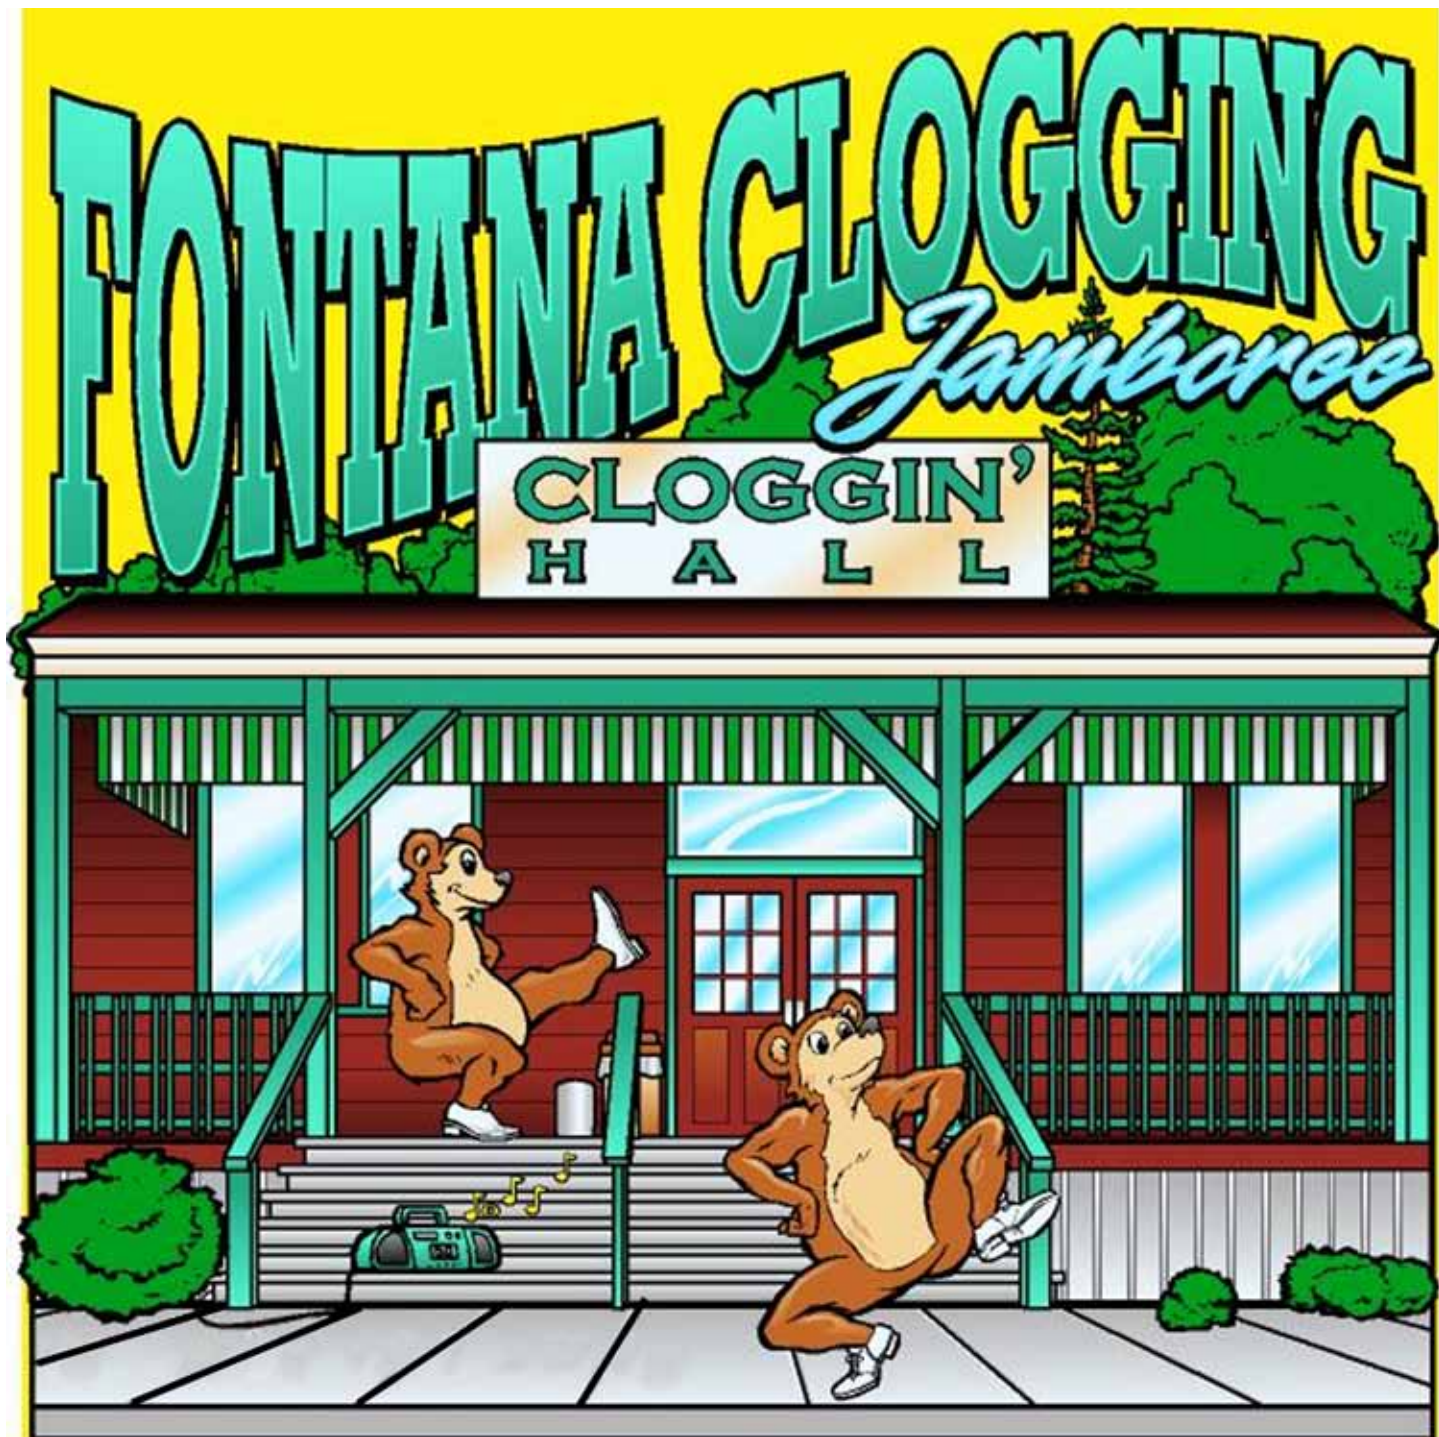

Since 2003, the Fontana Clogging Jamboree has continued to draw hundreds of dancers each year. Judy Waymouth and rubber-legged clogging legend Elliott Skeen of North Carolina have attended the jamboree, to the delight of dancers. Dancers come from all over the United States and Canada, and also from Germany and Australia. The dates for the 2011 Fontana Clogging Jamboree are September 23 and 25. For more information about the jamboree and more photos from past events, visit www.fontanaworkshop.com.

Cloggers step to their own fast beat

by Alissa Skelton, Lincoln Journal Star

"Do the Laura," said dance instructor Stan Webb.

About 20 young girls and one boy standing in three lines tapped their synchronized feet fast enough to make anyone's jaw drop -- except instructor Webb's.

"Faster now!" Webb shouted through a microphone as he did the Laura, too.

Jingle tap, jingle tap, jingle tap, jingle tap, jingle tap, jingle tap ...

The Laura is a challenging eight-count clogger dance step that some of Nebraska's best young cloggers learned at a dance workshop Saturday at Lincoln Christian School in Lincoln, Nebraska.

"I loved learning the Laura today because it was challenging to figure out where to put my feet," said Madison Mallum, a sophomore at Lincoln, Nebraska's Lincoln East High School. "At first I didn't get it. So my teammates helped me and I figured it out."

Learning the Laura took about an hour of constant clogging -- and after, the sweaty dancers were tapping their way out of the classroom still wanting more time to practice.

They were in luck. Capital City Dance Shack's

18th annual "Dance Your Socks Off" workshop, held in November, lasted seven hours, with a variety of hip-hop and clogging classes to choose from.

Modern-day clogging is a combination of hip-hop arm moves and precision percussive step dancing. Cloggers work as a team to create powerful tap sounds with their metal-toed and heeled shoes.

"Clogging is growing in Nebraska," said Joel Harrison, an instructor at Capital City Dance Shack. "Our goal is to preserve the heritage of clogging, America's true folk dance, while incorporating the modern style of today's competition teams."

The workshop classes were tough, taught by some of the best clogging instructors in the country. A lot of the participants already clog and tap, so they're accustomed to having instructors push them.

"Sometimes you have to make them feel small to make them dance big," said Harrison, who taught intermediate clogging in the Lincoln Christian gym Saturday.

Outside of workshops, some cloggers compete on teams. Mallum is on the Synchronicity competitive dance team for Capital City Dance Shack. Her team is ranked among the top four in the country for junior competition teams.

Harrison is the director of the competition teams for the Capital City Cloggers of Lincoln, Nebraska. He was the youngest clogging instructor ever inducted into the National Clogging and Hoedown Championship's National Clogging Hall of Fame, and was selected director of the 2002 All Star Pro Team for the Western United States.

Joel has been involved in dance for the past twenty years with a background in jazz, tap, power tap, and clogging. He has been teaching for twelve years – the last nine as Director of Competition Teams for Capital City Cloggers, Inc. Under his direction, CCC Teams have won multiple National Championships & multiple Gold Medals at the AAU Junior Olympics. His award winning clogging team, Whiplash, was featured on national television on the Arts & Entertainment Network special "The Competition", and was recently named a "Top Dog" on the famous television show "Showtime at the Apollo".

He is in high demand as an instructor at clogging workshops conducted throughout the nation. Joel has been a featured instructor at the National Clogging Convention and was the 2005 producer of the National Clogging Convention Showcase. He has traveled to Japan and Ireland as a member of an International Clogging Team and Joel recently joined "All That," an all male percussive dance team in their performances in the Carolina Opry in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

Under Joel's guidance, the studio's cloggers have competed in more than thirty regional competitions and more than ten national competitions. The teams are recognized for their high-energy precision and innovative choreography.

Synchronicity competed in Las Vegas, Nevada in November at the Clogging Champions of America Las Vegas Invitational Competition, performing four routines choreographed by their instructors.

"A lot of our kids like to work hard in a fun environment, and traveling is a part of that environment," Harrison said.

ACTION SHOTS

The Double Toe Times asked its readers to share photos of cloggers in action shots. We appreciate all of those who sent pictures of their own dancers, as well as those of clogging friends. In future issues, we will share more of your action photos.

We are happy to announce the winners of the action shot contest. Congratulations to David Carlson of Minnesota, a student at Wartburg College in Iowa (pictured on right) as he gets some air during a clogging demonstration in a campus talent show.

Also winning are the Rhythm N Motion Cloggers of Cookeville, Tennessee, under the direction of Brent and Amanda Herron. Pictured on the right and on the cover, the dancers animated style wins fans and trophies! The winners will split the $100.00 top prize. Be sure to watch future issues of the Double Toe Times for more great contests with great prizes and keep sending us your photos, stories and news!
