Doing the Thankful Dance

We are entering the season of Thanksgiving and I can't think of a better way to celebrate than with a "Thankful Dance."

No, I don't necessarily mean an actual dance, although there are enough dance steps to make a pretty good dance. Left foot lead with a turkey step... then do the mashed potato! What I am talking about is a conscious effort on ones part to exhibit thankfulness.

Writer Johannes A. Gaertner said "To speak gratitude is courteous and pleasant, to enact gratitude is generous and noble, but to live gratitude is to touch Heaven."

I grew up in a large family that was not poor by any means, but we always seemed to be able to do a lot with a little. Eating out was something that very seldom happened and was a huge treat when it did. My mother loved the holidays and Thanksgiving and Christmas were always a big deal in our household. Each child had a chair or a corner of the mantle with their presents all carefully arranged and our stocking right in front.

While I can't remember many individual presents I received during my childhood, I do remember that on your birthday you got a seat of honor and special fancy plate and got to pick the menu (I always chose chicken and dumplings). I remember our Christmas stockings always being filled with lots of little surprises that kept us busy. The little drawstring pack of "Gold Nugget" chewing gum, the apples, the dime store games and the foil wrapped chocolate coins were always found there, and to this day still bring a smile to my face anytime I see them on a store shelf.

I didn't realize it at the time, but as an adult I look back fondly at those traditions and the effort that my parents put into the little things that made such an impression on me.

It is easy in a world where technology changes faster than we can keep up and trends convince us to need the latest and greatest of everything to be satisfied with what we have. Learning to be grateful for what you do have both materially and in your life can be a very humbling experience that will make you take inventory and realize how blessed you truly are.

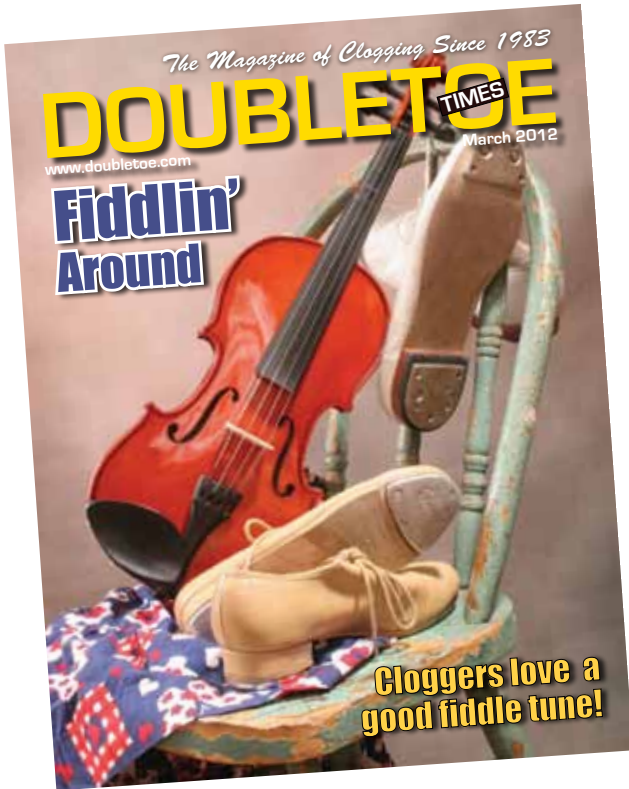

Making that sense of gratitude extend into your everyday life will keep you in check and give you a sense of peace and satisfaction that will have you doing the "Thanksgiving dance!"

May you and your family and your family of dancers enjoy the simple pleasures of the coming Holidays! Happy clogging! Jeff Driggs

EIGHT MEN “IN”

Meet the Four Additional Members of ALL THAT Who Joined the Original Members on this Saeson’s “America’s Got Talent”

Adapted from articles by Michael Williams of the Sevier County, Tennessee News, John Jarvis of the Marion Star, ALL THAT’s FaceBook Fan Page and Jeff Driggs, Double Toe Times

When all male clogging group “ALL THAT” made their journey on season seven of the popular NBC talent series “America’s Got Talent,” many viewers remembered the group from their first runner up finish in the first season of the show in 2006. This time around, in addition to four of the five original members, Mike Curtis, Delohn Collins, Mark Clifford and Brian Staggs, the group included several new faces.

When the group was formed in 1999, the guys had dominated the competition dance world for more than 15 years, collectively winning hundreds of solo grand championship titles and thousands of trophies each. Trading in their competition pasts for a performance future, the guys put together a signature style of high energy footwork and power with lots of machismo and sex appeal for the ladies and collective nods to their roots and origins that made audiences connect with them in a powerful way. With international travels, the group has performed in Austria, Germany, Italy, Ireland, and Japan, participating in some of the world’s most popular festivals. ALL THAT!, also has many television credits as well. In addition to America’s Got Talent, the group has an impressed television resume; Finalists on FOX TV’S 30 Seconds to Fame and ABC Family’s Dance Fever, CBS’S Star Search, The Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon, and the Speed Network’s Fast Track to Fame. The group’s picture appeared as a promotion on the side of Pepsi’s Mountain Dew cans, and they have been featured in Dance Spirit magazine, USA Weekend, Rolling Stone and numerous other publications. In 2003 ALL THAT!, was awarded the highest honor in clogging, the Pioneer Award, for their continuous support in promoting clogging and ushering it into mainstream media. In 2007 they were the show openers for the University of Kentucky Basketball’s “Midnight Madness,” performing for over 23,000 people.

In addition to performing, the group has a history of community service. “Each dancer in ALL THAT! has been blessed with an incredible talent and believes in giving back and helping those in need,” said ALL THAT member Mike Curtis. These guys have raised thousands of dollars for terminally ill children, held benefits for youth sports leagues, and performed for The Cancer Society’s Relay for life.

Since the time that the group first came together, the different opportunities that they were given made it difficult for some members to commit to major moves and life changes as they pursued individual careers, schooling or their personal lives. ALL THAT member Kenneth Fithen, of Kentucky, was unable to join the group for the AGT appearance as he and his wife Kelly expected the birth of their second child.

Because of the rules of the show, performers are allowed to return and audition with a percentage of changes to the line-up.

From a stint in Las Vegas to their current home in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina as regulars at Calvin Gilmore’s Carolina Opry, several talented dancers have worked with ALL THAT or performed in shows to fill in for them when they had other engagements or took time off. It was from this pool of incredibly talented young men that ALL THAT created the super-group that took the stage on America’s Got Talent.

Indiana native Drake Elkin was honored to be a part of ALL THAT for the talent show. With his boyish smile and shock of red hair, Elkin looks much younger than his 27 years. But this young man is a seasoned performer, who took time away from his job performing as a McCoy clogger in the Hatfield and McCoy Dinner Show in Pigeon Forge, Tennessee to participate.

“The hardest part of the America’s Got Talent show for me was that many of the group were together practicing in Myrtle Beach and I was by myself practicing in Pigeon Forge,” Elkin said. “However, I am getting wonderful on the job experience at the Hatfield and McCoy Dinner Show and I think as a group we were very strong in the show.”

The mind reading act of Eric Dittleman beat the group in the quarter-finals but Judge Sharon Osbourne played her wild card because she liked the group and kept them in the competition. She told the group she was proud of them and that they deserved to go on to the next round.

The group continued on to the semifinals and brought the crowd to its feet with a production that included dancing on platforms, solo dancing and setting their feet on fire and dancing with flames coming from their toes.

“It was an intense and brutal competition,” Elkin said. “It was a very tough week because there were so many great acts,” he said. “Thank you to everyone who voted! I really appreciate your continued support.”

Osbourne said to the group, “You are incredibly manly. You are fabulous, just fabulous.”

Judge Howie Mandel told the group, “What you do is amazing. I wish you the best of luck. If you like them, vote for them.”

Judge Howard Stern said, “I love your act. I can’t believe how entertained I am by this. You certainly have talent and you are really fascinating to watch. I love you, but this is going to be tough. People don’t realize the pressure of a live show - you make it or break it.”

While the group impressed the judges, they did not make it to the finals in a season filled with diverse talents.

When Elkin began clogging at the age of 10, he really wasn’t planning on a career as a clogger.

“My older brother started clogging a year before I did and at the time I wasn’t interested in clogging,” Elkin said. “My Mom asked me if I would be interested in clogging and I kept telling her, ‘no.’ She took me to a class with other kids my age and I saw all the girls and I said I would give it a shot. After two years I was able to travel and perform at festivals and that is when I noticed an older competition team who got to go on a two week trip to Europe and I thought to myself, ‘I’m going to give it my all so I can get to do that.’”

Elkin made the competition team and traveled for five years to performances all over the country and even got to perform on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry.

“I never got to go to Europe but here I am 15 years later getting the chance to perform on America’s Got Talent!”

The first clogging team Elkin joined at the age of 12 was The Rise N’ Shine Cloggers in Ellettsville, IN. At age 15, he moved on to another competitive team, The Clogging Sensation in Branson, Mo. under the direction of Stan Webb. He competed with the team three to four times a year for six years and even competed in the Junior Olympics in Detroit (AAU). Elkin won five gold medals and six silver medals.

The beginning of his connection with the clogging group “ALL THAT” stems from 2005 when Mike Curtis, the team leader of “ALL THAT” called and asked if he wanted to fill in with the group at the Carolina Opry Show in Myrtle Beach for the summer.

“We all grew up competing against each other in the clogging world and then we began to work together,” Elkin said. “I danced at the Opry in Myrtle Beach for the summer and then I went back to my competition team for a year.”

The Clogging Sensation team then dissolved as members of the group went off to school.

“It was sad when the team dissolved,” Elkin said. “I didn’t clog for three years and then one day in 2009 Mike called me again and asked if I wanted to do a show with his group, “ALL THAT,” in Hong Kong for eight days. Of course, I said, ‘yes!’”

Elkin did not have steady clogging work after that until 2011 when friend Jeff Driggs told him about an opportunity for a clogging job at the brand new Hatfield and McCoy Dinner Show. He auditioned, got the job and moved to Pigeon Forge.

“I get to dance for a living and this job is a dream come true.” Elkin said. “I love the crowd. I love the fast pace and the high energy of the Hatfield and McCoy Show. I give a lot of credit to my mother. There were a lot of moments when I got frustrated and wanted to quit clogging, but my Mom would not let me.”

Elkin and his wife, Nikkole live in Sevierville, Tennessee. His wife works for Camberra in Oak Ridge.

Prospect, Ohio native Brad Berry was also enjoying his first television competition experience as a member of ALL THAT, but is no stranger to dancing with the guys. He has been a member of the group in their Carolina Opry shows for many years and brings a wealth of percussive experience to the group. Brad isn’t the only professional dancer in the family. His twin brother, Bryan, is a member of a professional tap dancing troupe touring Germany.

Debbie Speakman said she remembers telling her twin sons “to ‘Try to find something you like for a career. As long as it’s legal, I’m behind you.’ It turned out there was something they could do.”

“The two of them, ever since they were about 11 or 12, have done nothing but live and breathe dance,” Speakman said. “They just love it. I figured one of the two of them would end up on something like this.”

Brad Berry said the experience of competing on the show was “really good. It was really stressful, especially we made it into the semis. The further you move on, the less time you have to prepare for the next round.”

Joanne Cook, owner of Joanne’s School of Dance on Indiana Avenue in Marion, Ohio said Brad Berry’s first lessons at her studio were a false start.

“He started out taking jazz, which was the funniest thing in the world,” Cook said. “He tried it for a little bit, but told me, ‘I don’t think this is for me.’”

Clogging soon became his passion.

“My brother started at the age of 10,” Brad Berry said. “He used to impersonate Michael Jackson and kind of got in (dance) that way. I did try tap dancing a year and a half after him. I didn’t feel comfortable, but I knew I wanted to do something similar. Clogging felt more comfortable to me. ... Once I got into clogging, I was just able to pick that up easier, as far as the body language.”

He and his brother both found success with Joanne’s School of Dance, Brad winning a half dozen national clogging championships through Rising Star, and his brother capturing several national tap-dancing titles.

Their mother said they were offered contracts at the age of 16 by Opryland in Nashville, Tenn., but “we didn’t take them up on that because they were still in high school. At that point, I thought this was serious. I always told them, ‘You may have to wait tables and dance in community theater.’” Instead, they were offered their first professional jobs with Common Ground, an Atlanta-based troupe of Irish step dancers. “They took off and they’ve been professional dancers ever since. They’re both doing exactly what they want to do now.”

Brad Berry has made a profession of the dance form because “he’s a dedicated young man,” Cook said.

Speakman said she signed her sons up for Cook’s dance school after Bryan Berry struggled academically.

“He had such a hard time in school,” she said. “He couldn’t do anything right. ... One day he called and said, ‘Mom, I’ve got to dance.’”

Touched by his pleadings, his mother supported his wishes and his sibling’s, as well.

Cook follows the careers of the twins and her other dancers closely.

“We’re very, very close,” she said. “When you know a child has talent, you push it to give him every advantage, and I’ve been very lucky. I must have some good kids.”

Berry is thankful for Sharon Osbourne, one of the AGT show’s three judges, who made the group a wild-card pick, allowing them to move on in the televised talent competition.

“We owe almost everything to her because even the wildcard episode she was our saving grace again,” Brad Berry said. The troupe gained the support of a second judge, Howard Stern, to continue past the wildcard show.

He said he’s enjoyed the experience, expressing gratitude to Carolina Opry, which has worked around the schedules of the four ALL THAT members under contract with the tourist resort entertainment venue.

“We didn’t sleep,” he said, laughing. “We were dancing all the time, but we could never have paid for this exposure. I loved it, and the group loved it.”

Even though the group did not advance to the finals, he counts himself fortunate to be doing what he loves as a career.

“It’s absolutely incredible,” he said. “There’s really no one word big enough to explain what that is like. I definitely don’t take it for granted.”

Harrison Barnes is the youngest member of ALL THAT. He started clogging at the age of 2 with Moncks Corner Dance studio in his hometown of Moncks Corner, South Carolina and has clogged for the past 22 years. As a teen clogger, Harrison was very successful as a solo competitor, winning grand champion at national competition and being named to Palmetto’s Finest, a recognition by the South Carolina Clogging Council, and also was named to the All American Clogging Teams by the America’s Clogging Hall of Fame organization. He was a member of the Corner Cloggers and the American Elite Cloggers, directed by his mother Vicki. As a junior in high school, Harrison was asked to perform in the Bailey Mountain Cloggers Spring Concert at Mars Hills College in western North Carolina. During this time he also was selected to be part of a clogging group featured in a music video by the folk group Uncle Earl aired on the CMT country music television channel. It was just before his senior year in high school that Harrison was approached about filling in for some of the guy’s with ALL THAT.

That began daily trips after school to Myrtle Beach for rehearsals and soon Harrison was performing nightly at the Carolina Opry theatre, filling in as the full time cast was making their first appearance on NBC’s America’s Got Talent.

Harrison’s natural stage presence caught the eye of management of the Opry and they asked him to consider coming there to work upon graduation. He decided to attend Coastal Carolina and become a full-time cast member of the Carolina Opry and member of ALL THAT. "Harrison loves to perform and share his love of clogging and dance," said his mother Vicki Barnes.

Harrison completed college in three years while dancing nightly and after five years with ALL THAT at the Carolina Opry, he decided to take a contract on Princess Cruise lines as a dancer and take the opportunity to see the world. He was ported out of Copenhagen, Denmark for 10 months before coming back and performing with ALL THAT again on NBC's America's Got Talent this season.

Rounding out the eight man ALL THAT group on America's Got Talent was champion clogger Joel Harrison of Nebraska. Harrison is a national champion solo dancer and director of the 2011 and 2012 back-to-back national champion dance team "Tap This."

Harrison credits his mother with starting him dancing in 1988 at age eight. He started teaching at age fourteen and started directing his first competition teams at the age of seventeen. Upon graduation from high school, Harrison took ownership of the studio and became director of the competition teams for the Capital City Cloggers of Lincoln, Nebraska, Harrison was the youngest clogging instructor ever inducted into the National Clogging and Hoedown Championship's National Clogging Hall of Fame, and was selected director of the 2002 All Star Pro Team for the Western United States.

He has been involved in dance for more than twenty years with a background in jazz, tap, power tap, and clogging. He has been teaching for more than a dozen years, and directing and coaching teams for almost as long. Under his direction, the Capital City Clogging Teams have won multiple championships & gold medals at the AAU Junior Olympics. His award winning clogging team, Whiplash, was featured on national television on the Arts & Entertainment Network special "The Competition", and was crowned "Top Dogs" on the famous television show "Showtime at the Apollo".

Harrison is in high demand as an instructor at clogging workshops conducted throughout the nation. Joel has been a featured instructor at the World of Clogging Workshop in Ohio, the Nickel City Clogging Festival in New York and the National Clogging Convention, and was the 2005 producer of the National Clogging Convention Showcase. He has traveled to Japan and Ireland as a member of an International Clogging Team and performed with ALL THAT in their performances in the Carolina Opry in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

Joel brought that energy to the stage with ALL THAT, adding elements of acrobatics and high-stepping to the routines that were applauded by the judges and the voters.

"The show was an incredible experience that I will never forget as long as I live!" Harrison said. "AGT constantly challenged our creativity, our drive and our capabilities. We all felt on top of our game the whole time. Continually keeping each other on our toes and pushing one another to make sure America could see that we were stepping our game up with each performance."

In a season marked by stellar talents in a variety of entertainment mediums, the guys continued to impress with their unique talent... an all male modern clogging troupe.

Harrison said the reality of the intensity of the competition hit home with him during the taping. "I remember when it hit me at first," he said. "I was standing there with my arms crossed, my nose an inch away from a sixty by forty foot American flag, and knowing that, when this flag comes flying up, it was game time!" Harrison said that the reality of charging into eleven million living rooms, knowing that you have one shot and one shot only to win the viewers and the toughest judges over on what Howard Stern referred to as "America's stage" was motivation for them to give it their all!

He admits being nervous, but said that "the comfort of knowing seven of your best friends were right by your side and we were all going through this together was a rush!"

"I would do it again in a heartbeat," he said. And Joel is quick to add that the biggest reward has been all the positive support from friends, family and the clogging community as a whole. "We just want the world to know how cool, unique and special this amazing sport of clogging is," he said.

Cloggers in the Spotlight

Over the fourth of July holiday, hundreds of cloggers and country western dancers gathered in Washington, D.C. to be a part of the America's National Independence Day Parade.

Just days following the devastating wind storm that swept through the region, the host hotel was without power with only hours to spare before groups began arriving. Another hotel accepted the group and quickly put together an opening banquet and practice session in their grand ballroom. The dancers adapted to the changes like troopers and everyone pitched in to make sure the show would go on.

On Tuesday July 3, dancers were bussed to the Lincoln Memorial for a day of performances for the thousands of tourists who crowd the Mall in Washington, D.C. National Public Radio did a live remote interview with members of the Sims Country Cloggers from North Carolina, directed by Jill and AJ Kirby and also interviewed Rob Pack of the Rhythm N Motion Cloggers of Cookeville, Tennessee.

Dancing at the Lincoln Memorial had special meaning for Rob. A member of Rhythm N Motion since 1999, Rob began dancing with the Evermean Evergreen Cloggers in 1985 out of Lebanon, TN.

He has danced on the Grand Ole Opry with both teams multiple times and has collected numerous awards from all sanctioned organizations, including being a member of the 2000 America's Clogging Hall of Fame All American Clogging Team.

An injury in 1997 cost Rob his leg, but he persevered and learned to dance with a prosthetic. While it has become more difficult and has limited his clogging career; he still is very active with helping the team. Being interviewed to represent the dancers was an especially proud moment for his wife Melissa and his teammates.

Dancers from all over the country performed at the base of the Lincoln Memorial. Teams included:

Sims Country Cloggers, North Carolina
Rhythm N Motion, Tennessee

Avery High Smooth Dancers, North Carolina

Cloggers Unlimited, Texas
City Clickers, Montana

Country Fire Cloggers, Missouri
Mississippi Magnolia Cloggers, Mississippi

Clogging Craze, Illinois
Rushmore Rhythm Cloggers, South Dakota

Teays River Cloggers, Ohio
Country Step Cloggers, Ohio
Pure Country Western Dancers, Ohio

Michelle Sheppard, Michigan
All Ohio Cloggers

Following the performances, groups returned to their buses to tour the city before having an evening free. One lucky bus had the pleasure of being invited to the prestigious National Press Club for lunch and tours by the organization's President (and a fellow clogger) Theresa Werner.

On Wednesday, the fourth of July, the buses loaded once more to head to the staging area for the Parade. Despite the heat of a July day, everyone did an amazing job of dancing the route down Constitution Avenue from 7th to 17th Street before a street audience of hundreds of thousands of spectators. In addition to the cloggers and country western dancers, The Parade consisted of invited bands, fife and drum corps, floats, military and specialty units, giant balloons, equestrian, drill teams, VIP's, national dignitaries, and celebrity participants.

Toward the end of the mile long route was the reviewing stand filled with VIP's and national dignitaries. The group performed a routine to "The Great Defenders," a song by Lee Greenwood that pays tribute to the branches of the service. As the dancers turned to the stands and began their choreography to the strains of "Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, National Guard along with the reserves..." a highly decorated military officer on the front row rose to his feet and saluted the dancers. The emotion of that moment was felt by everyone.

Following the parade, groups were taken to the National Mall area where they could enjoy the National Folklife Festival featuring different cultures in the Americas and a variety of ethnic groups.

That evening, parade participants are all part of the audience of the PBS Concert at the Capitol Building featuring the National Symphony Orchestra and one of the country's largest fireworks displays.

This was the second time that dancers participated in the event. In 2002, more than 1,000 cloggers took to the streets of our nation's capital in the National Independence Day Parade. Back then, the group also spent a day performing at the Lincoln Memorial, touring D.C. and laying a wreath and holding a ceremony at the Pentagon in honor of those fallen on 9/11.

(Top) Cloggers and country dancers line up for their place in the parade behind floats, balloons, bands and marchers.
 (Center) The ladies of the Hedlin family of Illinois dance under the name "Clogging Craze" and danced throughout the day to give other dancers a chance to rest, drink water and handle the heat of the day.
